Samuel Hill, Though, Is Of Fighting Sort

SEES FINE EFFECT

Thinks Marne Hero Ideal Peace Proponent

BY LARRY LEHRBAS

"I believe in peace, but I believe in fighting for it if necessary. I'm a fighting Quaker."

Samuel Hill, American peace propagandist and good roads builder, enunciated that fighting slogan as his creed last night upon his arrival from Peking. Mr. Hill sails today on the Admiral Liner Silver State to conduct Marshal Joffre and party to the United States as the guests of the United States Government.

Mr. Hill, builder of the Peace Portal at Blaine, Washington, commemorating 100 years of peace between Canada and the United States; builder of the famous scenic Columbia Highway; and millionaire who has devoted much of his time and more of his money to the dual purposes of peace and good roads throughout the world, came to Shanghai especially to conduct the famous hero of the Marne to America. He made arrangements with Marshal Joffre in Paris a year ago to take the Marshal on a tour of the United States and Canada, speaking for Peace and Good Roads, and came from Japan, where he has just been decorated by the Emperor for his good roads work in that country, to meet Marshal Joffre.

"On December 24, 1814, at Ghent, Belgium, a treaty of peace was signed between the United States and Great Britain," Mr. Hill said. It was to commemorate that peace between the two great countries that I conceived the idea of erecting a portal of peace on the boundary between Canada and the United States. On July 4, 1915, therefore, over 10,000 Americans and Canadians gathered at the little town of Blaine, Washington, for the ceremonial.

WILSON 'BOGUS PACIFIST'

"President Wilson"—Mr. Hill is a kindly old grandfatherly sort of a person, with snow white hair and mustache and beaming eyes, but his smiling face became set and his eyes hardened as he spoke of Wilson—"President Wilson," he continued, "received an invitation to the ceremony but he didn't even answer it. Wilson is a bogus peace man.

"After the corner-stone laying came the work, and then on September 6, the Peace Portal was formally dedicated. It was on September 6, 1620 that the Mayflower sailed from Plymouth, England to the new Plymouth in America. It was on September 6 that Marshal Joffre fought the forever famous Battle of the Marne. It was on September 6 that General Lafayette, the great Frenchman who aided the struggling colonies so much, was born. What could be more wonderful than that a monument to the peace of a hundred years between the United States and Canada should be dedicated on that memorable date?

"The governors of the states bounding on Canada, or their representatives, the premiers of the Canadian provinces, clubs, individuals and officials all met for the ceremony that day. And at 2 o'clock when the flags of the United States, Great Britain, Belgium, and France were raised at the Peace Portal hundreds of individuals, and literally the two nations, shook hands across the border. That was a real treaty of peace.

"The French and English have lived in peace for many years in Canada. We have lived for over one hundred years in peace with the Canadians. If that can be done the French and English can live in peace with a channel between them and we with oceans between our friends."

INSCRIPTIONS SIGNIFICANT

Mr. Hill then explained that on the Peace Portal at Blaine were four inscriptions, each significant of the long peace between the American countries. They read: "Brethren Dwelling Together In Unity," "Children of A Common Mother," "Open For One Hundred Years," "May These Doors Never Be Closed."

"And now when Marshal Joffre comes to the Peace Portal we're going to rededicate it," Mr. Hill said.

Automatic Auctioneer

The loud voice of the auctioneer may soon be still, as Harry Voight, a Berlin inventor, has recently invented a mechanical auction device, which was tried out very successfully at the first butter auction in the German Capital since the war. The invention is a high dial, erected at a proper elevation, so that everyone can see it. The outer circle of the dial is divided into one hundred parts. In the center of the dial is a high indicator, which is operated by electricity. Attached to the desk in front of every buyer is a miniature dial, with corresponding numbers to the big one, with a small indicator. As soon as the buyer wishes to bid he turns the dial to his desired figure. By electric power the indicator on the big dial turns to the corresponding number, and at the same time the buyer's seat is illuminated in the outer circle.

GOVERNMENT AT HONGKONG TELLS FACTS OF STRIKE

Denies Pressure From London, Or Upon Shipowners

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hongkong, March 11.—The Gazette notifies that in view of various rumors which have been spread in the colony and elsewhere in connection with the settlement of the seamen's strike, it was decided to publish an account of the part played by the Government in the negotiations.

Replying to questions (1) whether the Hongkong Government had received instructions from His Majesty's Government that the seamen's strike must be settled and (2) whether it was a fact that the terms of the settlement were due to pressure upon the shipowners by the Hongkong Government, the Government replied that (1) no instructions of any kind had been received and (2) that the Government throughout had remained entirely neutral as far as the commercial aspects of the strike were concerned, merely tendering its good offices with a view to a settlement. Its efforts had been confined to taking steps for the preservation of peace and order and securing the maintenance of food supplies and essential services.

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, March 8.—An interesting sidelight on the Hongkong strike situation was obtained yesterday from Mr. Frank Rhea, Industrial Trade Commissioner, attached to the American Legation in Peking. Speaking of the strength and endurance of the Cantonese seamen, Mr. Rhea expressed his conviction that very few people in China realised to what extent labor is organised in the Far East.

AMERICA PLANS "PRESSURE" FOR RECONSTRUCTION

Refusal To Go To Genoa Part Of Plan To Influence Europe

(China Press Service)

Washington, March 9.—A high official said today that the refusal of the United States to participate at Genoa may be regarded as the first step in the campaign of "tactful pressure" to promote economic rehabilitation of Europe.

He added that the refusal should not be regarded as an indication that the United States desired to hold aloof from the grave problems confronting Europe.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, March 10.—The Allied Ministers of Finance, who are present conferring in Paris regarding international finance and currency questions in preparation for the Genoa economic conference, have begun discussion of a vast international loan with a view to the mobilisation of the German debt, preceded by steps to stabilise exchanges.

(China Press Service)

London, March 9.—It was officially stated that the decision of the United States not to participate at the Genoa conference will not affect the Paris conference as far as Britain is concerned. The United States' refusal failed to cause surprise in official circles here which realised that Washington's efforts are to have the conference treaties ratified.

Liner Silver State Slightly Delayed On Account Of Fog

The Admiral Line steamer Silver State which arrives at Woosung this morning has been delayed by fog and consequently the tender with outgoing passengers, which was to have left the Customs jetty at 10 o'clock, will not sail until 12 noon.

The same line's steamer Pinetree State is scheduled to dock at the China Merchants' Central Wharf at 1 p.m. though there is a possibility that she too will be slightly delayed on account of the fog, which has been very heavy outside.

Marshal Joffre Ends Visit And Sails On Silver State Today For The United States

Brilliant Scene Is Enacted On The Bund When Shanghai Volunteer Corps Passes Under Inspection Of Great French Warrior

Marshal Joffre today will conclude his visit to Shanghai and will set sail for the United States on the Admiral Line steamer Silver State, the guest of Mr. Samuel Hill of Seattle, Washington.

As a mark of special honor to the distinguished visitor he will be taken from Shanghai to the waiting steamer at Woosung on board one of the Chinese gunboats, and besides a delegation of French and other foreign officials, he will be accompanied by a group of Chinese dignitaries. In addition to Marshal Joffre, Madame and Mlle. Joffre seven others, including three officers of his staff, make up his party.

The outstanding event of yesterday's program for Marshal Joffre was the inspection of the Shanghai Volunteer Corps on The Bund. Following this he was the guest at tiffin of the Municipal Council of the International Settlement. After the tiffin Marshal Joffre was given a glimpse of Shanghai at play, as he was taken to the Paper Hunt Club's race meeting at the Shanghai Race Course where he witnessed a number of the steeplechase events of yesterday's racing program.

INSPECTS CORPS

Shanghai's Volunteer Corps, almost as cosmopolitan in its makeup as the forces which so many times marched before him in France, passed in review before Marshal Joffre, victor of the Marne.

The scene was Shanghai's Bund. Overhead smiled cloudless skies. Silk-hatted officials, tall, trim officers, brightly dressed women, a mulling throng of Chinese made up the thousands upon thousands of spectators who looked on, for the most part silently, but occasionally breaking out into a hand-clapping or cheering as some especially favorite company passed by.

Despite the back-ground of the Whangpoo, where wildly chugging hydroplanes sought to distract attention from the more beautiful vista of junks and other odd river craft, the event might have been any of a thousand similar affairs of war-time were it not that here men of many nations had allied themselves in peace as there they had allied themselves in war.

SYMBOL OF ALLIED UNITY

This was the thought apparent in the minds of most of the onlookers. As company after company of British, Scottish, Portuguese Americans, Chinese and Japanese passed by, their eyes clicking simultaneously to the command of "Eyes Left," the veteran French military leader himself seemed to envision the spectacle as a living symbol of allied unity.

The entire review went off without a hitch. Police arrangements for the affair were excellent, and despite the dense crowds, there was an entire absence of confusion. Long hours before the time actually set for the review to begin—12:45 p.m.—crowds started flowing toward the Bund. The small stand erected just opposite the end of Nanking Road was packed to its capacity. Park benches were brought into use and hundreds stood on tiptoes on them. Every building front along the Bund was packed with spectators.

Arrangements had been made to have all of the companies lined up for a quarter of an hour before the scheduled arrival of the distinguished visitor. In company front formation the line stretched for blocks from the dapper Light Horse Company stationed near the Customs Jetty to the farthermost British Infantry Company near Peking Road.

FACES CAMERA BATTERY

Directly opposite the reviewing stand, a military band was stationed. Motion picture photographers played their cameras up and down the long ranks. As the Marshal's party approached the reviewing stand through solid lines of mounted Sikhs, the entire corps came to attention as one man. The band struck up a few bars from the Marseillaise and the thousands of spectators uncovered.

A few more minutes devoted to posing for motion pictures, and the review started, the Light Horse in the lead, then the Field Artillery, then the Machine Gun Company, then the Engineers and on through the various infantry companies.

Fifteen minutes later, while the throngs pressed in to get a glimpse at him, Marshal Joffre left the field by motor car and went to the Shanghai Club, where he was the guest of the Shanghai Municipal Council at tiffin.

In the morning he had paid a visit to Siccawei to view the work conducted there by the French Jesuits.

University Head In Plea For Funds

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, March 8.—Dr. C. T. Wang, President of the Chung Kuo University, has again drawn the attention of the Government to the need of funds for that institution. In a petition to the Cabinet he suggests that the University which is operated privately at present, should be reorganised as a government institution. In the course of his petition Dr. Wang traces the history of the University from its establishment in the first year of the Republic. He concludes by stating that salaries have recently fallen heavily in arrears and that financial support is urgently needed.

British Engineers To Be Locked Out

(Reuter's Service)

London, March 11.—The engineering negotiations have failed and the lockout occurs tomorrow. It is understood that the unions have not agreed to the employers' demand that the fundamental principle of the right of employers to exercise managerial functions must be accepted by the union's representatives before even lockout notices could be suspended. After a three-hour sitting, the conference of representatives of the shipyard trade unions and the shipbuilding employers federation adjourned till March 14.

ASKS LEAVE

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, March 8.—Mr. Chang Tsu-shen, Chinese Minister to Sweden, has applied to the Government for permission to return to China on sick leave.

Finance Minister Not Expected Back

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, March 8.—Following the resignation of the Minister of Finance, Mr. Chang Hu, and his departure for Tientsin, semi-official circles today appear to entertain a strong doubt of his returning to his post. It is thought that the Vice-Minister of Finance, Mr. Liu Hsieh-pu, may be persuaded to remain in office, while the portfolio of Finance is expected conferred as a concurrent appointment on one of the remaining members of the Cabinet.

Peking, March 7.—Mr. Tung Kang's inquiry into recent domestic loan transactions has created a difficult situation which indirectly has led to the resignation of Mr. Chang Hu, Minister of Finance. It appears that in a memorandum to the President Mr. Tung cites eight points revealing irregularities in connection with the issue of the $96,000,000 bond issue.

It is understood that Mr. Pan Fu was responsible for these, but as Mr. Chang Hu had arranged to utilise a portion of this bond issue for his financial reorganisation measures the drastic changes recommended by Mr. Tung placed the Minister of Finance in an awkward position and he determined to clear himself of responsibility by resigning.

The resignation of Vice-Minister Liu is expected today, while it is reported that several other officials of the Ministry of Finance, who were brought into more intimate contact with the bond issue, have not attended the Ministry today. Mr. Chang Hu left Peking for Tientsin this morning.

7 SLAIN IN S. AFRICAN LABOR WAR

Mine Manager Taken To Veldt And Shot

(Reuter's Service)

Pretoria, March 11.—Martial law has been proclaimed on the Rand.

Johannesburg, March 10.—The strikers today attacked the Brakpan mine and killed seven special constables who were guarding property. They captured the manager and two constables who were taken out to the Veldt and shot in cold blood.

Strikers in the suburb of newlands also captured 27 police constables and threaten to shoot them if a recapture is attempted.

The police have retaken the Town Hall and also seized the Trades Hall.

Johannesburg, March 10.—There has been a considerable amount of fighting at Benoni and on the far eastern rand. A number of persons have been killed on both sides. Aeroplanes took part in the fighting, using Lewis guns.

In the fighting at Johannesburg itself between police and a commando of strikers, one striker was killed and 13 were wounded, and four police were also wounded.

Capetown, March 10.—In the House of Assembly, the Premier, General Smuts, declared that South Africa was faced by one of the gravest situations in its history.

He paid a tribute to the behavior of the natives, but the white people, he said, had no cause to be proud of recent events.

The Premier appealed to all those who possessed any influence, to keep the natives out of the last critical and dangerous phase of the struggle.

Johannesburg, March 10.—Mr. N. J. De Wet and Colonel H. Mentz, the Ministers of Justice and Defence, respectively, issued a statement denying that a native rising on the Rand was imminent. They say that the natives are not disposed to give trouble and that the whole country may be assured of protection.

Meanwhile, military units are being enrolled as speedily as possible, and a citizens' protection league is being formed to run the various services in the town.

Simultaneously with the proclamation of martial law there was fighting between the strikers commandoes and the police at Benoni Springs and Brakpan and the whole far east part of the Rand.

Several more natives were killed and wounded by the rifle fire of strikers, who hoisted a red flag on the Johannesburg Town Hall.

Guards Preparing For Railway Work

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, March 8.—The Metropolitan Police Authorities are hastening the formation of the railway guards force for the Shantung Railway. It is reported that the force will be under the chief command of Major-General Chien Hsi-lin who will hold the rank of Inspector-General, with Colonel Ching Lin as Chief Superintendent. In addition to three hundred men being drawn from the "Chinese Legation Guards" (General Munthe's efficient force) two hundred and fifty selected men will be recruited from the other police forces of the Capital.

General Tien Chung-yu's opposition to the Police being brought to Shantung from Peking, instead of being recruited in Shantung, was waived on condition that their salaries would be paid by the Central Government without drawing upon the financial resources of Shantung.

PACTS SAFE IN SENATE BY TWO TO ONE MARGIN

Reuter Forecast Unusally Optimistic

FIGHT KEEPS UP

Now Charged That U.S. Delegates Were Duped

(Reuter's Service)

London, March 11.—Washington indications point to a Senate vote favoring the ratification of the Four-Power Treaty by a margin of two to one.

An argument which is being used in the course of the debate by the foes of the Treaty alleges that Mr. Balfour induced Mr. Hughes to accept the Treaty while no other member of the American Delegation knew anything until it was sprung upon them, when they weakly consented, ignorant of its import or menace to American interests.

The Senate defeat of the Treaty would involve the failure of the whole Washington Conference but if the voting goes as it is expected the figures should read 66 to 30 for the Treaty, which is two more than the requisite constitutional majority.

Apparently a stronger feeling exists among the Democrats against Senator Lodge than against the Treaty itself and they are taking revenge on the Republican leader for his attacks on ex-President Wilson.

Senator Lodge, who told the Senate that the defeat of the Four-Power Treaty would endanger the limitation of armaments and that the failure of the Naval Treaty would shock and startle the world and bitterly disappoint the American people, is now engaged on the greatest battle of his long political career.

Washington, March 10.—Senator Robinson delivered his expected broadside attack against the Pacific Treaty in the Senate today, criticising the inconsistency of its advocates, who declared simultaneously that it was the greatest achievement in modern times in the interests of world peace, and yet that it imposed no obligation on its signatories beyond that of conferring together.

Senator Robinson interpreted Article 2 of the Treaty as similar to Article 10 of the League of Nations Covenant, and as a clear alliance contemplating the employment of force if necessary to repel aggression.

He said that the Treaty tended to commit the United States to a passive attitude with regard to Japan's dealings with Russia and China, and declared that it was shameful that the United States should be bound to give moral, if not military support to Japan, in the event of Russia trying to expel the Japanese from Siberia.

Senator Robinson questioned Senators Underwood and Lodge concerning the origin of the Treaty. Senator Underwood stated that Britain had not wished to cancel the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, without having something in its place.

Senator Lodge said that the Treaty had been drafted by many hands, and had been revised and amended by the American delegates.

Senator Robinson resuming, expressed the opinion that Mr. Balfour had suggested and Prince Tokugawa had written the Treaty.

(China Press Service)

Washington, March 10.—On being shown President Harding's statement that the Lansing-Ishii agreement was abrogated by the 4-Power Pact, Senators Reed and Borah declared that such was not the view taken of the matter by Japanese officials who attended the Conference.

"I am gald to have President's view of it," said Senator Borah, and added that the President's statement would be considered to terminate the Lansing-Ishii Agreement. Senator Reed said that either the treaty contemplates no more than the President admits or it makes a continuance of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance a menace—(message uncompleted).

Washington, March 10.—Senator Robinson debating on the Four Power Treaty called it an "alliance." He said that it would not promote peace, "but would invite the formation of rival alliances and lead to great harm."

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, March 9.—Asked in the Senate why Saghalien and other Islands were specified in supplementary treaty, Senator Lodge replied that it was a direct way to exclude Japan. Senator Reed asked if the delegates had considered that Sakhalin had valuable oil deposits, which might be used if Russia sought to oust Japan. Senator Lodge replied that as far as he knew, there had been no consideration of this question.

Replying to Senator Pomerene, Senator Lodge said he did not know whether the tentative drafts of the Pacific Treaty had been preserved. When Senator Lodge stated that no understanding could be reached under the Treaty except by the consent of all the signatories, Senator Reed asked whether there would be any objection to a reservation, saying plainly that the decisions must be unanimous. Senator Lodge replied that he did not think a reservation was necessary, but that he had agreed with the Foreign Relations Committee's reservation, for which he had voted.

Quaker Will Guide Joffre On U.S. Trip

"One side of the Portal looks toward the Atlantic. On the side that looks toward the broad Pacific we are going to emblazon a commemoration of the Disarmament Conference. Suitable inscriptions and the flags of Great Britain, the United States, France and Japan will be put on the arch with Marshal Joffre's benediction. And Marshal Joffre is just the man for the job, don't forget that. They can't call him a carping pacifist. He's been there!"

Following the ceremonial at Blaine Mr. Hill will conduct the Marshal and his party on a tour of the two countries, the famous warrior speaking in all the principal cities for the two things nearest Mr. Hill's heart—Peace and Good Roads.

"Can't you see the tremendous effect that's going to have?" Mr. Hill asked. "Marshal Joffre, saviour of civilization through his military leadership, beloved warrior hero of the entire Allied world, speaking for Peace and good roads in drab civilian clothes, the trapping and tinsel of the warrior missing."

Marshal Joffre will then officially open the Highway of Peace, the wonderful new road that stretches from the Canadian border down the coast of the United States for 2,000 miles to Tia Juana, Mexico.

TOUR TO BE FILMED

"The entire program, from the landing of Marshal Joffre's party on the Silver State in Victoria to the departure for France will be photographed for the movies," Mr. Hill said. In addition to the historical significance of the trip there will be several things that will add a touch of the romantic—when General Currie, who was decorated with the Legion of Honor on the battlefields of France by Marshal Joffre, in turn presents the Marshal with a diploma from McGill University at Montreal, for instance.

"The moving picture will be called 'Sacred Faith and A Scrap of Paper.' And in it will be the following poem—I don't know who wrote it, I've cabled and wired all over the world to find out without success—but I think it's wonderful.

"On August 5, 1914—the German Chancellor to the British Ambassador—'What, would you go to war just for a scrap of paper?'

"A mocking question—
Britain's answer came swift as the light
And searching as a flame
'Yes!' For a scrap of paper we will fight
Till our last breath, and God defend the right.

"A scrap of paper where a name is set
Is strong as duty's pledge and honor's debt.
A scrap of paper holds for Man and Wife
The sacrament of love, the bond of life.
A scrap of paper may be Holy Writ
With God's eternal word to hallow it.

"A scrap of paper binds us both to stand
Defenders of a neutral neighbor land.
By Heaven, by Faith, by Honor—Yes, we fight
To keep our name upon the paper white."

And Sam Hill, fighting Quaker, banged his fist down on the desk he was standing near, the shining light of the true crusader for the ideal of peace in his eye.

"Peace? Yes! I believe in Peace with all my heart—I believe in it strong enough to fight for it."

"THANKS TO THE BRITISH NAVY"

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS.

Sir:—Today's article in your paper by Capt. Hopper was interesting and no doubt true in most respects contained a paragraph in which he says the the spring of 1918 Americans were landing on French ou at the rate of 300,000 a month, "Thanks to the British Navy." While the British Navy lent invaluable assistance to our transports, at the time of which Capt. Hopper writes, the American Navy was represented by some fifty or sixty destroyers and other auxiliaries, operating in foreign waters by which the majority of our transports were convoyed into France without a loss.

Perhaps this letter may savor of petty criticism but to one who was over there on one of the first destroyers sent by Uncle Sam and one of the last to return, doing convoy work throughout our part of the War it is not pleasant to see the credit of a duty well performed given to some one else.

The object of this letter is not to create a discussion as to the relative value of the services performed by the Allied Navies but to alter a possible false impression which may arise from Capt. Hopper's statement. Thanking you, I am,

R. S. P.

March 10, 1922.

PASSPORT PROFITEERING

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir:—So that is where our hard earned shekels that we pay for passports go? According to your issue of this morning the U. S. Consular service has made a profit of more than four million dollars in a year. This is an outrage on the traveling and shipping public who have to pay it. If the money were to be expended in increasing the facilities afforded Americans abroad, I would say nothing, but it will go into the general fund and when the Consular Service asks a few beggarly dollars, it will be turned down cold by the congressman from the back blocks who wants to "be shown" and has no possible viewpoint by which he can interpret even the least intricate fact demonstrated to him.

Why should we travelers be taxed to build customs houses in Podunk? Yours, etc.

CARCINOMA.

THE CHAPEL IMPROVEMENT BONDS

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS.

Sir:—In your issue of this morning you state that many improvements are now being made by Chapel officials. Now I do not wish to appear as a carping critic, but if I were a taxpayer in Chapel I certainly would refuse to buy bonds or pay any imposts for new things until some of the old had been fixed. Sanitary improvements and the building of sewers are planned. What use are they without an adequate water supply?

Operating a factory in which the water supply was vital for the success of the work, I had my fill of the Chapel water system, the only systematic thing about it being the way in which it refused to flow from pipes only 20 feet above the ground. Many times even the ground mains were empty and no water flowed from taps scarcely three feet above the ground level.

Complaints were futile, except once when we were informed over the phone at noon that the engineer had gone to sleep and would start the engines when he awoke. This factory was within 1,000 feet of a huge standpipe that should have given ample pressure yet we were constrained to put in our own pumping plant which cost us money and lost the Chapel waterworks the revenue of five-horsepower worth of water.

Quoting Mr. Punch, we would say to those planning factories in Chapel the one word "Don't." Yours, etc.

DESICCATED.

Salt Surplus Of January Released

According to a Peking telegram, the Diplomatic Corps has released the January salt surplus, which amounted to $3,700,000, to the Peking Government as the result of the appeal made by Dr. W. W. Yen, the Minister of Foreign Affairs and Acting Premier. Dr. Yen intimated that the peace of the capital was being threatened if the surplus was held up any longer.

The money was held up, it will be remembered, by the Corps because of the seizure of a considerable sum of salt revenue by Wu Pei-fu, super-tuchun of Hupeh and Hunan for alleged military expenses.

MISSION BOARDS HAVE P'ANS FOR RE-ORGANISATION

Proposal Calls For Dividing Country Into Six Districts

(Chung Mei News Agency)

Peking, March 9.—Dr. Leighton Stuart, President of Peking Union University, is leaving for America on the Silver State, to discuss in America with the home mission boards the program drawn up by the Educational Commission that has just completed its tour of investigation in China. It advocates sweeping reforms in the hope of getting greater efficiency and better results in the educational line in China.

"Now that communications are easier in China," said Dr. Stuart, "it has been recommended that the whole China field be divided into six areas, North China, South China, East China, West China, Central China, and Fukien, and it is proposed for the sake of increased efficiency that consolidations take place of the institutions that already exist. It was also found by the Educational Commission in their tour of investigations that there should be a reorganisation of the work given in the various institution to prevent duplications and repetitions.

"Thus the recommendations that have been made for the North China area are that there be a consolidation of the two big institutons: Pekng University in Peking, and Shantung Christian College in Tsinan into one big corporation that will divide the work of one big University between them. This University is to be known, if the plans go through as the North China University, or, as the University will be actually called, Pei Hua University.

"The work is to be divided between Peking and Tsinan. In Peking will be done the general work, leading up to the social science courses, with an arts course and literature. In Tsinan will be a premedical school, and in each place will be a school of theology. This autumn will begin the training of grade teachers in Tsinan. The details of the work will be developed as the needs of the district show themselves, for the area is to be considered as a whole. There will be a single control, here and in America, and it will be possible to give a higher education, achieve efficiency and get rid of waste.

"There will be provisions for women that will allow them to follow exactly the same course of study as the men, though the ways and means have not yet been worked out."

Dr. Stuart expects to be gone for three months only. He will visit New York and perhaps London.

Tuchun has tendered his resignation. Opposition has also been expressed by the Shantung Provincial Assembly against the new measure. President Hsu is considering the appointment of either Chang Hua-chi or Chang Kwang-chien to succeed Tien.

Chang Tso-lin To Observe Birthday With Conference

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, March 10.—While there have been no substantial developments politically, great interest is evinced in the conference at Mukden on the occasion of General Chang Tso-lin's birthday tomorrow. The departure of Mr. Tsao Jui, the Civil Governor of Chihli, to Mukden today is regarded as indicative of important discussions.

The movement to appoint General Pao Kuei-ching as Premier is understood to have the support of the Chihli faction, but it is said to be indifferently received by General Chang Tso-lin.

It is stated that a mandate will be issued tomorrow appointing the Vice-Minister of Finance, Mr. Chung Hsi-ming, Acting Minister of Finance, in the place of Mr. Chang Hu, whose resignation is being accepted.

The Hallowe'en Ghost

By Annie Finkelstein (Age 13)

Shanghai children are contributing some interesting stories in THE EVENING STAR contest, the following being an entertaining example. The rules of the contest are that boys must write "fact" stories and girls "fiction." Five dollars will be paid for every contribution published and there will be special prizes when the contest is closed. Children contributing are asked to send their pictures with their stories.

"Glory hallelujah!" chanted Violent Stanley, dancing into the schoolroom, "oh, kids, you can't think what's happened!"

"Well, you might tell us!" growled Boland, one of the twins, who disliked being called a kid by his younger sister.

Nellie, the youngest of the four, looked up from her book, saying scornfully, "Oh, it's only another of Vi's jokes!"

"It isn't!" flashed Violet, "if you're so disagreeable, you needn't listen!""

"Well," said Nellie, sullenly, "how was I to know was real news? You're always joking!"

"Oh, stop jawing!" said Bonald, the other twin, "let Vi tell us her wonderful news!"

"You'd never guess!" said Violet, "Pat and Molly have invited us to Donovan Hall for Hallowe'en, and they want us to stay a fortnight!"

"Jumping Jupiter!" exclaimed Bonald, "how scrumptious! Did the mater say we cou'd go?"

"Yes," answered Violet, "and Pat says there's going to be a Hallowe'en Party—look, here's his note."

While they are reading it, I will try to tell you something about them.

There were four of them, the twins, Boland and Ronald, aged fifteen, were the eldest. Violet, two years younger, came next, then Nellie, the baby of the family, a ten-year-old.

The four children lived with their parents at the Whigtown, and their Irish cousins, Pat and Molly Donovan, lived in the next town, about five hundred miles away. And when the six met, "Heaven protect our parents!" as Pat piously declared.

The next day the Stanleys' were off for Fairtown, and that evening there were great rejoicings at Donovan Hall. The six children made enough noise for twenty, Squire Donovan laughingly said, but his wife, placidly knitting replied that she liked to hear children's voices—it showed they were healthy. Meanwhile the children were having a talk by themselves.

"It's Hallowe'en tomorrow, you know," said Molly, "we're going to have a grand party on the afternoon, and we're all going to wear white masks and cloaks made of sheets, to represent ghosts, you know. Won't it be fun?"

"Yes, lovely," agreed Nellie, whose eyes sparkled at the idea of a party, "shall we all wear masks also?"

"Yes," answered Molly, "we've got them upstairs for you, and ours too."

"Did you know we had a real ghost here?" asked Pat of Violet, winking at the twins the while.

"No, have you really?" she asked eagerly, not seeing the wink.

"Yes, really," chimed on Molly. "it's our Hallowe'en ghost. It walks about on the cemetary."

"In the cemetary!" echoed Nellie, whose blue eyes grew larger and larger during the recital.

"Yes," said Pat, taking up the tale, "and at midnight he starts digging a grave, and then he wrings his hands and groans, and clanks his chains."

"Oh, how horrible!" shuddered Nellie, who was very easily frightened.

"Bosh!" exclaimed Violet, "you don't really believe it, Nell, do you? It's all Pat's rubbish!"

"Is it, Miss know-all," cried Pat, "I'd like to see you go to the cemetary tomorrow at midnight!"

Violet hesitated. Then after all, she reflected, what harm could befall her? At the worst, one of the boys dressed up to scare her.

"I'll go'" she declared unexpectedly.

The others gazed at each other in surprise. They had not bargained for this.

"Do you really mean it?" asked Pat, incredulously.

"Of course!" she threw back scornfully, "why d'you think I said it? For fun? Or to hear myself speak?"

Pat felt crushed. "Well, girls say all sorts of things—" he began, but Violet cut him short.

"I don't" she answered, "and I always mean what I say. I'm going to the cemetary tomorrow at midnight, and I won't see your beloved ghost, either !"

That night, in their room, the boys formed a plan. Ronald, who was the tallest, was to dress up, and parade the cemetary, wringing his hands and clanking his chains.

"It'll give Violet a bit of a scare!" chuckled Pat.

"Do her good," grunted her loving brother Boland. "She thinks too much of herself. Needs putting down a peg." "She'll get it, never fear," chuckled the third, rolling into bed.

The next day, at midnight, a dark figure crept into the cemetary. It was Violet, and in spite of her boasted bravery the day before, she shivered a little as she glanced about her. There was one street lamp burning near the entrance, and its dim glare cast an eerie light over the tombstones.

Violet shivered. She was a strong girl, but the silence and desolate appearance of the cemetary got on her nerves. She moved forward slowly, then gave a start, for in the distance she saw a dim, white figure, spade in hand, bending over a grave. Pooh! she told herself, 'twas only her imagination! She moved nearer, and saw that it was indeed someone, for it was groaning, and wringing its hands. Violet shivered again, then came the thought, "It must be Pat or one of the twins. I'll show them I'm not afraid!"

But Pat and the twins were hiding in the shrubbery, and now they glanced at each other in consternation. Who could this ghost be? Ronald had been waiting to go behind Violet, but now they were all watching the other ghost.

Now Violet advanced until she stood just behind the figure. Suddenly it dropped the spade and turned, and as Violet looked at it, she saw two sunken eyes that glared at her from under black, beetling brows; two rows of huge, glittering teeth, expanded in a diabolical grin, two hands that shone with an unearthly light, then her nerves gave way, she gave a loud shriek, and fell down in a dead faint. Instantly the figure stooped, and, lifting her in its arms, strode away, muttering under its breath.

The twins and Pat had not reckoned for this, and now they looked at each other in dismay. What was to be done? Who was this strange man, and what did he want with Violet? They had sense enough to know it was no ghost, but a man, though what he was doing they knew not. They had passed so close to them that they could see his glittering hands, which had so frightened Violet, but they knew it to be phosphorous, as was also his face.

"Let's follow him, and see where he goes to," whispered Pat, "then perhaps we'll be able to get Violet."

He walked softly after the man, the twins following suit. It was past midnight, so the street was deserted, and there was no one to see the strange procession wend its way. First came the "ghost," carrying the unconscious Violet, then Pat, and after him the twins, one of whom was also attired as a ghost, with shining face and hands.

At last the man stopped before a tumbled-down cottage, and Pat drew his breath sharply.

"It's Mike Dooley," he said softly, "he's insane. I might have guessed it was him. I'm going on, but you'd better stay."

They obeyed, and Pat walked up to the man, who was fumbling with the door-knob with one hand, while he supported Violet with the other.

"Good evening, Mike," he said pleasantly, "what are you doing with my cousin?"

"Good evening, young sir," mumbled the man, "I thought it was my daughter who's dead they say but she's not, though this isn't she. Her hair was golden, and this one's is black. You can have her, if you want."

"Can't we take her in first?" asked Pat, with a pang of pity for he remembered that Mike had gone mad at his daughter's death. "She's fainted, you know."

"Yes, yes," muttered the man, "come in, sir, come in. Here's some water for the girl."

But the girl now sat up and looked around her, then, seeing Mike, she gave a faint cry and fell back again. Instantly Pat was at her side, soothing her as if she had been a child.

"It's all right, Vi," he said "it's only Mike He's insane, and he thought you were his dead daughter, come out of her grave which he was digging up."

"Poor man," said Violet softly. Pat turned to where Mike was standing, mumbling to himself.

"Good night, Mike," said he, "I'm going to take cousin home. Don't go wandering around the cemetary at night again."

No, I won't, young sir, "mumbled the man, "good night to ye, sir."

As they passed out, Violet drew a long breath of relief. "Oh, what an adventure it was" she said, half to herself.

"I say," said Pat humbly, "I'm awfully sorry I dared you to go. If I'd known"—"It's all right, she answered.

"I'm going" said Violet, "but I hope I won't dream of the Halloween ghost.

THE ELECTRIC EQUIPMENT CO.

Do You Know These Facts?

Candle-Power: The unit of measure of a light-giving power at its source.

Foot-Candle: The unit of intensity of illumination at any given point. One FOOT-CANDLE is the intensity of illumination produced by a 1 c.p. source at a distance of 1 ft.

Metallic Filament or Mazda Lamp: This is the standard lamp commonly used in the small sizes, having a straight side. A vacuum exists inside the lamp.

Type "C" Lamp, Gas Filled Half-Watt: This is a pear shaped, long necked, lamp used to the best advantage in sizes ranging from 100 WATTS up.

These lamps are filled with a Nitrogen gas, so are sometimes spoken of as Gas-Filled lamps, also as Half-Watt lamps, because they are advertised as saving half the number of watts as compard with the older Mazda lamp. The actual saving however is from 30% to 40%.

Watts Per Candle: The amount of electricity measured in WATTS required by a lamp to produce 1 candle-power, and this determines its efficiency.

EXCHANGE CASE COMES UP AGAIN IN MIXED COURT

The case of the Continental Stock and Produce Exchange, in which Brazilian interests are involved, was up again in the Mixed Court yesterday, before the newly appointed Brazilian Assessor, Mr. Scorrar and Magistrate Tsang.

The testimony taken was principally that of Mr. J. P. Pereira president and liquidator of the concern, who is asking an injunction against six Chinese banks to restrain them from paying out $40,000 of the exchange's money said to be on deposit. Mr. Pereira is also charging one of the directors with misappropriation of a large amount of the concern's funds. Mr. J. B. Davies appeared for Mr. Pereira and Mr. J. Em. Lemiere for the directors of the corporation while Mr. M. B. Brown represents the shareholders.

The latter two attorneys sought to bring out that the majority of the stockholders are opposed to Mr. Pereira as liquidator and that the meeting at which he was so named was irregular. This Mr. Pereira denied, declaring that he called two meetings at which no quorum was present and that at a third meeing there were 80 shareholders in attendance who moved unanimously for a liquidation and appointed him to the position of liquidator with acclaim. He accused the directors of "watering" the stock and stated that he wished to ecure the $40,000 held in the Chinese banks in order to cover liabilities and divide the remainder pro rata among the shareholders.

The case was adjourned.

Fines Assessed In Traffic Cases

Mr. L. A. Fullbrook, charged with obstructing Avenue Edward VII by leaving a motor car there and also with being intoxicated while in charge of the machine was fined $10 by Magistrate King in the British Police Court yesterday. The defendant denied the charge of drunkenness and stated that the car's steering gear had gone wrong. The Magistrate also fined G. N. Marshall and Co. $2 for leaving a lorry on Weihaiwei Road without lights on the night of March 1.

In the American Court Commissioner Schuhl fined Mr. R. C. Hutchison $10 for leaving a car standing in front of the American Club on one occasion from 5:20 to 6:12 p.m. and on another from 6:20 until 8:10 p.m.

A charge of reckless driving brought against Mr. P. H. Dunbar, of the Amos Bird Company was dismissed by Commissioner Schuhl.

UNION CLUB HAS SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Though showing a deficit of $5,450, the Union Club Proprietary, Ltd., enjoyed a successful year during the last twelvemonth, according to announcement by President Chu Pao-san at the annual meeting held Friday night. The loss for the year was $2,700 less than for the previous year and was occasioned principally by the installation of a lift in the building and the chairman expressed hopes for a profit in the next balance sheet.

British membership has increased in a gratifying way during the past year and the club rooms, especially since the ruling to allow ladies to visit them, have been much more patronised.

The new committee named consists of Messrs. L. Wilson, J. H. Little, T. G. Drakeford (British), V. G. Lyman, O. G. Steen, P. P. Whitham (American), Chu Pao-san, Fu Siao-en and Chun Shih-kai (Chinese).

(China Press Correspondence)

Hangchow, March 9.—The Chekiang International Famine Relief Committee has voted $80,000 for relief work in the building of the dykes in districts visited with serious floods during the year. In addition to this work $200,000 has been set aside to start a fund for the opening of the outlet canals to the sea.

This latter work will let the waters of this northern part of the Province run off and thus avoid future devastation. It is expected that the full appropriation for this important work will be secured and that the completion of this flood prevention program soon will come.

Pine Tree State Will Arrive Today

The steamer Pine Tree State, of the Admiral Line, which was scheduled to arrive in Shanghai yesterday, was delayed by heavy fog off Tungsha Light Friday night, with the result that she did not reach Woosung until last night. Admiral Line officials announced last night that she would dock at one o'clock today.

The report that the ship was delayed by engine trouble after leaving Kobe was entirely erroneous, as she made full speed after leaving that port, and until she entered the fog bank that hung off the China coast Friday night.

Among those on aboard the vessel is Dr. Wang Chung-hui, one of the chief Chinese delegates to the Washington Conference.

While in Shanghai, Dr. Wang will stay at the home of friends. A dinner at the Bureau of Foreign Affairs and a reception at the Chinese General Chamber are planned in his honor on Sunday evening and Monday afternoon.

The Pine Tree State will also bring a heavy consignment of mail.

British Women's Association Notes

GENERAL

It is with very great regret that the resignation of Miss E. A. Belbin of the post of Honorary Treasurer has been received by the Executive Committee, owing to her approaching departure from Shanghai. Miss Belbin has earned the gratitude of the entire Association for the whole-hearted and able manner in which she has carried out her duties and her excellent work in guilding the finances of the Association through their first year will be long remembered. Miss Belbin holds a record for attendances at Committee meetings and has not missed one since the inauguration of the Association. The Committee has been exceedingly fortunate in securing the services of Mrs. S. B. Neill to fill the vacancy caused by Miss Belbin's departure.

The Executive Committee also have reason to regret the impending departure from Shanghai of Mrs. Garton Stone who was co-opted to serve on the Committee some months back. With the two above exceptions all the remaining members of the Executive Committee are willing to stand for re-election at the general meeting on Wednesday next. The meeting will first of all decide as to whether the future Executive shall consist of 12 or—as is recommended by the outgoing Committee—18 members. It should be clearly understood that it is not necessary to vote for the full number, 18 is, in point of fact, more effective to vote only for those who are specially desired by the member who is voting.

Following are the names of members who have joined during the past week: Mrs. M. C. Browne, Mrs. A. W. Chapman Madame Marcelle Ellis, Mrs. Leigh Garner, Mrs. A. F. T. Holland, Mrs. G. Hooper, Mrs. G. Burton Sayer, Mrs. J. Tippin, Miss F. Tippin, Miss L. Tippin and Mrs. S. E. Toeg.

LITERARY SECTION

Members of the Literary Section have received an invitation from the Literary Department of the American Woman's Club to be present at a meeting held on March 21 at the Carlton Cafe, when Mr. Charles Kliene will give readings from Chinese mythology. Tea will be served at 4 o'clock. R. S. V. P. either to Mrs. Maguire 415 Avenue Joffre or to Mrs. Cromarty at Headquarters. The next meeting of this Section will take place by kind invitation of Mrs. Ayscough at 20 Gordon Road, when she will read a paper on "Tai Shan, the Peak of the East." Tea will be served at 5 p.m. All members wishing to attend are asked to communicate with Mrs. Maguire as soon as possible.

SPORTS SECTION

The Committee of the Sports Section have so far found it impossible to obtain tennis courts for the ensuing season. In order, however, to fill this need certain members of the Association have very kindly offered to place their private courts at the disposal of the Section. Particulars in regard to this will be announced later on. The annual general meeting of the Sports Section will be held at Headquarters on Thursday April 6, at 5 p.m.

MUSICAL SECTION

The next fixture of the Musical Section will be on March 24, when Mrs. Donne and her friends may be relied upon to provide an especially attractive program. This Section is greatly to be congratulated upon the really beautiful piano which, through the kind offices of Mr. F. J. Burrett and his friends, has been presented to them. The instrument is a baby Grand by Weber and will meet a very real need in this most popular Section of the Association.

ART SECTION

The Art Section invites all members interested to attend a highly attractive lecture to be given by Mr. W. G. R. Murphy, manager of Messrs. Norbury Natzio and Co., Ltd., on the subject of "Color Printing." The lecture will be illustrated by a series of pictures exemplifying the process. This will take place at Headquarters on Thursday, March 16, at 5:30 p.m. A very pleasant invitation from the American Women's Club has been extended to members of the Art Section to attend such lectures as may be of interest to them on the program of the Literary Department of the Club. The program includes a most interesting series of papers on Chinese subjects.

DRAMATIC SECTION

The success which attended the first concert given by the Dramatic section of the B. W. A. has spurred its members on to more ambitious efforts and they now propose to give a Tea Dance and Cafe Chantant entertainment at the Astor House Hotel on Wednesday, March 29 at 5 p.m.

A very attractive program is being arranged which will be given during the dance intervals and among those who have kindly consented to take part are Miss Vera Doria, whose histrionic capabilities are well known in Shanghai, and Capt. A. S. Campbell, whose talent for recounting Scotch stories has never been equalled in the East. Mrs. Isherwood also has promised to sing, but this is only to mention a few of the items which are in store for those who attend.

NEEDLECRAFT SECTION

The Needlecraft Section held its first meeting on Monday March 6, from 3 to 6 p.m. Seventeen members were present and all enjoyed a most interesting evening. The idea of an Easter Fair was mooted and found much favor with those present. Several new members have joined since the Section was inaugurated. Mrs. Lewis has very kindly offered to give the members instruction in the art of stencilling. Those who wish to avail themselves of this opportunity should bring a yard of any sort of material to the next meeting and have a practical lesson. Plans for the future of the Section will be discussed at the next meeting on March 20.

HOSPITALS AID DEPARTMENT

This Department of the Social Service Board is going ahead splendidly and arrangements for its development on a big scale are in process of making. These will be announced within the next few days and all interested should make a point of keeping the afternoon of Tuesday, April 4, disengaged. The next meeting for work will be at Headquarters on Tuesday next, March 14, when the workroom will be open from 9 till 12 and from 2 till 6. All B. W. A. members are cordially invited.

Prof. Shastri Gives Lecture On Religion

At a public meeting at 7a Ezra Road, yesterday afternoon, Professor H. P. Shastri, President of the Shanghai Lodge of the Theosphical Society, delivered an address on "God or idol."

The speaker dwelt on the virtual idolatory of those who blindly followed precedent and authority, without troubling to apprehend the principles of the teachings by which they ruled their lives. This applied equally to persons who adopted any formal religion and reposed their faith, without understanding, on sacred books, persons who accepted without question the experiences of mystics whose methods they did not apply, and others who sought occult meanings in natural phenomena which admitted of scientific explanation.

Professor Shastri emphasised the importance of religion and philosophy for those who applied the teachings to their own unfoldment. Authority on such matters had been repeatedly disclaimed by leaders worthy of respect and attention. They realised that a knowledge of God must come by man's own initiative, and that appeals to the authority of persons or written words were ut offerings made to idols. Idolatory of this kind was a spiritual slavery more serious and harmful than the slavery of the body.

SEMENOV TELLS OF HOPE TO UNITE ALL OF SIBERIA

Ataman Semenov, anti-Bolshevik Cossack chieftain who slipped quietly out of Shanghai under an assumed name and with special passports for the United States two weeks ago, will go first to Washington and then to Paris hoping in the latter place to secure aid for a campaign for Siberian unity, according to an interview secured with him by the Japan Advertiser while the steamer Empress of Russia was in Yokohama.

Semenov sailed on the Empress of Russia under an assumed name after being an exile in Japan, Tientsin and Shanghai since his autocratic rule in Siberia collapsed.

Semenov declared that the continued occupation of Silberia by Japanese troops was a hindrance to the country's development in all respects and asserted that the peasants of the country were united behind him in his plan for an all-Russia revolution in the spring that would once more unite the country under a democratic government.

"The people of Siberia want a Federation," the Ataman said, 'and have asked me to take the military leadership. I am carrying resolutions and documents given to me by committees who I believe represent the Siberian people and I intend to present them to the Russian National Committee in Paris. I do not believe the government at Vladivostok will survive the spring, and the same thing might be said as regards Chita. A new federation of the peoples of Siberia with Irkutsk as the capital appears to be the only remedy for the situation there The committees which have visited me have expressed entire harmony in my program for Siberia, which includes a democratic Siberian government as expressed in a Federation, and also includes the interesting of foreign capital for the development of the country."

Semenov secured special passports from the State Department at Washington after he had failed to secure passports from either the American Consulate General at Shanghai or Tientsin. He will visit Washington upon his arrival in the United States and then proceed to Europe.

St. John's University Notes

The seventh annual debate between St. John's University and Soochow University will take place some time in May, the St. John's team travelling to Soochow this year for the contest. The subject, translated, is "Resolved, that China suffered a defeat at the Pacific Conference." St. John's has the affirmative side of the argument.

Inter-class Chinese debates will start at St. John's on March 17. As there are eight classes there will be three rounds, the final debate to take place on April 7.

The 1922 Johannean Board was organised at the end of the last term and editors and managers are hard at work. It is expected that the eighth volume of the annual may be published by the middle of June.

A committee has been formed with representatives of the faculties and the student organisations of the university and St. Mary's Hall, for the inauguration of a social center in the village of Zao Kya Doo. Dean John A. Ely was named as temporary chairman and a meeting will be held shortly with prominent residents of Zao Kya Doo for the purpose of discussing a constitution and to enlist support for the undertaking.

Enver Pasha And Lenine Conspire To Raise Red Flag In Turkey

BY LEO PASVOLSKY

Washington, Jan. 28.—The recent report of the arrest of Enver Pasha has apparently proved to be as much of an unfounded rumor as the report concerning the assassination of Mustapha Kemal, which came several days earlier. The mere fact of these two reports however, presents considerable interest, for both of them are more than feasible. In the light of the situation which has been unfolding itself in the Near East both of the reports may prove to be premature announcements of events which are quite likely to happen.

Enver and Kemal, as contenders for power in Turkey, are undoubtedly the most interesting figures in the whole situation there. Enver is the more spectacular of the two, and appeared in the limelight much earlier than Kemal. For the present Mustapha Kemal holds the center of prominence in the affairs of the Near East, but Enver is most active in the plots for his overthrow. And there is a personal enmity of old standing between the two leaders, which dates much further back than the period of Kemal's rise to power. At the time when this enmity began Kemal was an obscure army officer, while Enver was the all-powerful Minister of War. This enmity has persisted, and has become more and more bitter, as the position of the two leaders became reversed. Kemal is now the all powerful arbiter of the fates of Turkey, while Enver is in exile. But the present contest between them has all the romantic glamour of the storied East, with its plots and counterplots and its interminable net-work of intrigue. Moreover, in this struggle Moscow's Communist hand plays an all important and perfectly visible part.

Enver's rise to power has been one of the most fantastic chapters of modern history. He is the son of a humble carpenter of Constantinople, brought to the attention of the mighty by the merest chance. His father was employed in the construction of a new palace and for some reason or other one day attracted the attention of Abdul Hamid. The Sultan asked him if there was anything he desired particularly and the carpenter's reply was that he wished most to have his son receive an adequate education.

The result was that Enver was sent to a military school. From that time on his rise was due to a combination of most marvelous luck and of personal intrepidity and readiness to act on an impulse, however strange and apparently impossible.

DISTINGUISHES HIMSELF

Upon his graduation he was stationed in Smyrna and there as a young lieutenant he distinguished himself for personal courage in connection with a local railroad strike. The revolution of 1908 found him in Macedonia, where he immediately became an enthusiastic revolutionary and upon his arrival in Constantinople was acclaimed as one of the heroes of the revolution. It suited the purposes of the real leaders to permit this young, handsome and reckless army officer to remain surrounded by the halo of revolutionary heroism and to stay in the limelight, though a mere figurehead as far as the actual conduct of affairs was concerned.

After the events of 1909 he was picked out by the Germans as a possibly useful person for the consummation of their ends. The Turkish government sent him to Berlin as the military attache of its embassy there and during his stay in Germany Enver became very strongly pro-German. When the Italo-Turkish war broke out Enver made his way into Africa in some romantic fashion and there performed daring feats. Incidentally, he announced himself to the Mahometans among whom he worked, as the son-in-law of the Sultan, which was stretching the point of his relationship with the Khalif to a considerable extent. He had married a niece of the Sultan, which, of course, brought him into the highest circles of the Turkish aristocracy. But his posing as the Khalif's son-in-law served him in good stead in his work among the Mahometans of Africa.

After his return to Turkey, upon the termination of the war, and during the first Balkan war, Enver remained in the shadow together with the whole of the Party of Union and Progress. He and his party, therefore, did not share the blame for the defeats which Turkey suffered in her encounter with the Balkan Slav coalition, and seized their opportunity immediately after the disastrous events of the war forced upon the Sultan's government the disgraceful terms of peace. Then, early in 1913, Enver again came to the front, in the most spectacular manner of his whole checkered career.

Mounted on a white steed, he rode at the head of a group of officers to the Sublime Ports and made his way into the hall, where the Cabinet was in session, deliberating upon the treaty of peace. Enver announced the Cabinet deposed, and in the fighting which took place several ministers were killed. Among them was the Minister of War, who was particularly hated because he was in command of the Turkish troops in Thrace, which had suffered the most disgraceful defeats of the whole war.

Enver became the hero of the hour, and this popularity was greatly enhanced when, soon after that, he disappeared mysteriously from Contantinople and suddenly reappeared in Adrianople, which he recaptured for Turkey. As a military exploit this expedition was ludicrous. The city was not defended, for the second Balkan war was on and the former members of the Slav coalition were busy fighting against each other. Enver simply rode into the city at the head of a small detachment of cavalry, but the feat caught the popular imagination, and Enver's popularity increased tremendously.

MADE HIM WAR MINISTER

Several months after the Enver coup d'etat, the new Minister of War was assassinated, and Enver became Minister. He wielded tremendous power, and was really instrumental in the reorganisation of the Turkish army, as well as the consolidation of the German forces in the Near East, which led to Germany's successes there during the first stages of the World War. It was Enver who was mostly responsible for Turkey's decision to enter the war on the side of Germany. It is commonly understood that Enver was very heavily subsidised by the Germans all through his incumbency of the office of Minister of War.

It was at this period, too, that the enmity between Enver and Kemal began, though the exact circumstances of the quarrel do not appear clear. In any event, Kemal, then a colonel in the army, was sent to the Dardanelles front, presumably in the expectation that something might happen to him. But Kemal acquitted himself very creditably and was later on placed in command of the Turkish forces in eastern Anatolia. But his chances of promotion were very slight, as long as his personal enemy, Enver, remained the all powerful war lord of Turkey.

At the termination of the World War Enver escaped to Berlin. Then, after remaining in the shadow again for over a year, he suddenly appeared in Moscow. The summer of 1920 found him on his way back to the Near East, this time charged with an important mission of the Soviet government and of the Third Internationale. He appeared for a short time in Baku, at the time of the Communist congress in 1920, and was wildly greeted by the Communist leaders assembled there. Then he proceeded on his way, but not into Turkey. His mission took him to Afghanistain, in Central Asia.

Enver's mission in Central Asia consisted in recruiting and organising there armed Communist forces to be used for actively carrying out the comprehensive plans which the Third Internationale was then formulating for its work in the Near East. Enver was designated chief of staff of these forces.

However, his mission in Central Asia does not appear to have been successful. The Communist leaders miscalculated their own strength in Afghanistan. Their strategy was defeated by the work of British diplomacy, which succeeded in re-establishing the British influence in Afghanistan and thus safeguarding India from a dangerous Communist conflagration on that border. Enver again disappeared from the political horizon, only to reappear, less than a year later, in the heart of the Caucasus, working in close co-operation with the local Communist leaders and laying plans for active participation in the affairs of Turkey, which had begun to consolidate her forces in Anatolia, under the leadership of Enver's old enemy, Mustapha Kemal.

The communist activities in the Near East have proceeded along three definite directions. The first has been toward India, through Turkestan and Afghanistan. As we saw above, the communist work in this direction has not proved to be successful. The second has been in Persia. Although here the Communists have had more success than further in Central Asia, the actual value of these successes is not very great, since this direction is at best merely an auxiliary one to the first. The third direction has been Turkey, and today this is the principal line of the communist activities in the Near East.

EAST THE FIRST OBJECTIVE

The importance of the communist activities in the East has been greatly emphasised on a number of occasions by the Soviet leaders. They have come to the conclusion that, while it would have been better for the cause of the world revolution if communism could be immediately established in various parts of Western Europe that seems to be out of the question at the present time. The great powers of Europe cannot be attacked by communism in their own strongholds, so the strategy of the world revolution assigns the place of primary importance to communist activities in the East. Attacked in their colonies and dependencies, the great European powers would be sufficiently weakened to be attacked with a fair chance of success in their own territory. So runs the argument of the present-day communist strategy.

Communism as such, however, cannot be introduced in the East. So much even the Soviet leaders understand. They stand ready to support any movements there. Kemal's Pan-Islamic movement is, from this point of view, an excellent ally for them. And Turkey is considered very good vantage ground for their operations.

By late spring of 1921, however, a situation developed in the territory ruled over by Kemal which caused the Soviet leaders much apprehension. Outwardly most friendly relations had become established between Moscow and Angora, as a result of the treaty signed in March. But under this outward stamp of friendliness the relations between the Communists in Moscow and the Nationalists in Angora were most uncertain. The Kemal movement faced a grave danger of being crushed by its military enemies, and at the same time showed definite inclinations toward making a peace and coming to an understanding with the Allied powers. Either of those eventualities was fraught with danger from the Communist point of view.

In order to be prepared for either of the two eventualities the Moscow leaders took a number of important measures. The Soviet military forces in the Caucasus were considerably strengthened, the number of troops by the summer of 1921 being variously estimated at from 120,000 to 200,000. In these numbers were included the Soviet regular troops moved from other parts of Russia and the local forces of the republic of Georgia, Armenia and Azerbaidjan. Important changes were made in the organization of these forces, and their command was concentrated more than before. Arms and munitions were landed in the ports of Trebizond and Samsun.

The object of these measures was twofold. In the first place the Soviets were preparing to render Kemal effective assistance in case his forces should be battered away by the blows of his enemies. And in the second place a definite threat was created in the rear of Kemal's forces, designed to restrain any desires that he may have to enter into close relation with the Allied powers, against whom the Soviets have been supporting him so strenuously.

However, neither of the two eventualities developed to a sufficient degree to call into action the forces which were thus brought into being by the Soviets. Kemal succeeded in defending himself on the field of battle, while his agreements with the Allied powers are still too limited and indefinite to call for any active interference on the part of the Soviets, but there are other elements in the relations between the Communists and Kemal which make for uncertainty and possible difficulties.

REDS' PROPAGANDA OFFENDS

The first of these elements is the fact that the Communists have found it impossible to abstain from anti-religious propaganda on the territory of the Angora government, as they had solemnly promised to do. We must remember that the Kemal movement is essentially religious, and its leaders resent greatly the attempts which the Communists make from time to time to carry on their usual anti-religious propaganda in which they indulge wherever they conduct their agitation.

The second element making for the uncertainty of the Moscow-Angora relations is the fact that the Kemal movement, being one of pan-islamism, naturally strives to include within the sphere of its influence all the Mahometan groups. Its political agents are actively at work among the Adjarians, Tartars and various Mahometan mountaineer tribes in the Caucasus. The Soviets quite naturally object to these activities.

The third element is the firm determination on the part of the Angora government to wage a definite struggle against communism and communist propaganda on its own territory. During the last few years the Kemal government has been particularly active in this regard. The Anatolian newspapers have been outspoken in their opposition to communism and to the Soviet system of government. There are very strong elements in the government itself which are frankly antagonistic toward the communist ideas. For example, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Yussuf Kemal Bay, is one of the leaders of the "Committee for the Salvation of the Country," which has for one of its principal objects a determined struggle against communism.

It has been reported that in July the Soviet Commissary of Foreign Affairs, Tchitcherin, sent a note to the Kemal government demanding a definite reply as to whether or not it is in favor of the Soviet system. No reply was made to this demand, but the announcement of the note caused considerable difficulties in Angora and led to a number of actual fights in the Assembly.

Thus, Moscow finds its Angora ally rather difficult to handle from the point of view of the objects for which it intends to use him. It is rather anxious to see some one else in control of affairs, rather than Mustapha Kemal, but prefers not to act openly in this direction. Nor does it have to commit itself to any branch of diplomacy in this regard. For the work of getting rid of Kemal and substituting in his place some one who would be a pliant tool in the hands of the Moscow leaders can be assigned to some other organisation. In this case this active organisation happens to be the directing elements of the local communist groups in the Caucasus itself.

OVERTHROW OF KEMAL

These local groups do not disguise their desire and their determination to overthrow Mustapha Kemal. The most important of these groups is the Baku committee of the communist party, which called a conference of the Caucasus communist leaders last summer for the purpose of considering the exigencies of the current situation. At this conference, which took place on June 2 and 3, it was decided to organise a movement for the overthrow of Mustapha Kemal.

The Caucasus communist groups have the support of the executive committee of the Third International. It has been reported that the eastern section of the executive committee has approved the plans of the Caucasus communists, although the Soviet government itself probably withholds an official approval. These plans are most ambitious and include in their scope a definite attempt to bring the whole of Turkey within the sphere of communist influence. The active head of the Council of Action, established by the Baku Congress in 1920, Comrade Pavlovich, has formulated the communist aims in the Turkish section of the Near East in the following words:

"As long as the Bosporous and the Dardanelles remain in the hands of capitalist Europe, as long as the British squadrons shall continue to have free access to the Black Sea, Soviet Ukraine and Soviet Caucasus will continue to bleed in their struggle against international reaction and its paid agents. Only from the moment when the Black Sea shall have come into the Soviet hands, when either a red Turkish flag or the flag of the Soviet Federation shall have been raised over Constantinople, shall we begin peaceful life and acquire an opportunity to devote our efforts to creative work."

In order to bring about this state of affairs the Caucasus communists and their Moscow sponsors consider it necessary first of all to remove Mustapha Kemal from his place of power at the head of the Turkish Nationalist movement and to substitute for him some one who would be obedient to their will. Their candidate is Enver.

It has also been reported that the eastern section of the executive committee has already entered into an understanding with Enver and a number of other Turkish leaders in the Caucasus whereby these Turkish leaders are to receive assistance from Moscow in a struggle which they are to wage for keeping the Angora government in line on an uncompromising pan-Islamic policy. Enver is understood to have promised the Moscow leaders that he would overthrow Kemal if that became necessary for the carrying out of this understanding.

In accordance with this, the followers of Enver in Angora are making strenuous efforts to obtain the government's permission for Enver's return to Turkey. However, the government is unalterably opposed to this.

In the mean time, Enver is active in the territory of Arjaria, a small district around the city of Batum, which is excellently suited to his purposes. Most of the population of this district is Turkish, and the district itself lies on the boundary of the Turkish territory controlled by the Angora government.

In this territory Enver has organised a group which he calls the "Unier and Progress People's Soviet party." True to his old associations with the Young Turk movement, in which he played such a spectacular part in the five years preceding the World War, Enver retains in the name of his new party the words "union and progress," which were the watchwords of the Young Turk movement. But true also to his new associations with communist Moscow, Enver adds the words "People's Soviet." The avowed object of this party is the establishment of a Soviet form of government in Angora.

SOVIET TECHNIQUE

The announcement concerning the formation of this party furnishes the key to the preparations which are apparently being made by the Caucasus Communists, for such an action is usually the cornerstone of the Soviet technique for carrying out a revolution in another country. This technique is somewhat as follows: A revolutionary party is formed on the territory of Soviet Russia, bordering on the country which had been chosen by the Communists for their attack. The leaders of this party are permitted to recruit troops and organise their military forces on Russian territory. Then with the aid of these troops the party makes its way into the country to be revolutionised, proclaims itself government and appeals to Moscow for assistance, which, of course, is in readiness and is immediately furnished. This is what was done in Georgia in February, 1921, and in Mongolia in June and July, 1921.

In the case of Georgia another feature of this Soviet technique was illustrated. The Moscow government was officially insisting that no Communist activities against Georgia be attempted. Then the Azerbaijan and Armenian Communist leaders, outwardly acting on their own initiative, carried out the whole operation and then reported the incident to Moscow as an accomplished fact. And when the appeal came for assistance, it so happened that there were Soviet forces available on the very boundary of Georgia. This was very fortunate, a prominent Soviet leader said at the time, for these Soviet soldiers could "fly like eagles" to the assistance of their brothers in Georgia.

Now we have a very similar situation. The district of Adjaria was recently recognised by Moscow as an autonomous state; no doubt, to give Moscow an alibi in case Enver fails. The latest reports from Batum state that Enver has recruited 300 men. For his purposes that may be sufficient; for, no doubt, if he should succeed in crossing into Turkey and should appeal to Moscow for assistance, whole Soviet divisions will "happen to be in the immediate neighborhood," and surely these Soviet divisions will be ready "to fly like eagles" to the assistance of Enver's newly proclaimed government.

While Kemal must be, of course, fully aware of all this and must have taken ample precautions, it is also possible that some twist of internal dissatisfaction in Anatolia may give Enver the necessary opening and afford him still another opportunity in his truly remarkable career to ride to power, mounted on a white steed, with reckless dashing and almost incredible luck for his principal sources of strength.

Bobbed Hair Wins Boy Students' Vote

Merits Outweigh Demerits, Solemn Ruling Of Judges At High School Debate

San Francisco, Jan. 14.—"Should 'bobbed' hair be generally adopted as a fashion for women?"

Five boy students, acting as judges in the debate between girl students in the Berkeley High School, voted four to one in favor of awarding the contest to the affirmative side.

Among the arguments, advanced in favor of "bobbed" hair were that it was an economical hairdress, a time-saver, a nerve and energy amplifier and efficiency move.

Thousands of dollars could be saved annually by women in the elimination of hairpins and nets through the universal adoption of "bobbed" hair, according to supporters of the trimmed locks.

Other points brought out by the opponents of the argument were:

Woman would lose her personality by cutting her hair; that the ultra-modern behind the move were trying to destroy old traditions of culture in their overzealousness to become masculine, and that the standard of culture in which woman has been the recognised leader would be destroyed by "bobbed" hair.

EUROPE TO WIPE OUT NUISANCE OF PASSPORTS

Expect Tourists Soon May Go Around The Globe Unhampered

Washington, Feb. 12.—The passing of the passport is gradually being brought about in response to a growing disposition on the part of the nations to get rid of burdensome war time regulations of travel. Persons prominent in diplomatic affairs here unhesitatingly predict that as a consequence the time is not far distant when tourists may girdle the globe virtually as unhampered as in the days before 1914.

The agitation for a removal of the necessity for consular visas upon passports and a letting down of the bars in border regulations had its inception and strongest backing among the business men of all nations.

Restrictions upon travel have reacted upon the commercial life of those nations accustomed to gather large yearly harvests from the well filled pockets of foreign visitors, it was pointed out, and that reaction to the pinch of war time necessity is likely to carry the pendulum of travel restrictions back to its old position.

Belgium was the first to ease the restrictions upon travel imposed at the beginning of the war. Convinced that the necessity for rigid examination of visitors was at an end with the coming of peace, the Brussels Government so modified its restrictions that persons passing through Belgium en route to other countries, and persons intending to visit Belgium for a period not greater than ninety days, might do so without credentials.

That move was followed by agitation in Switzerland for sililmar letting down of the bars, and the recent action of Switzerland in granting permission for visitors to enter the country without passport restrictions is believed to be indicative of the trend of thought in virtually all the other European countries.

The position of the United States is somewhat different from that of its sister nations, it is explained by officials of the State Department. America's restrictions on immigration make it vitally important that the influx be carefully sorted at its points of origin. It is said, and for that reason all persons intending to enter this country must appear before an American consul and have their passports approved with a visa.

By so doing the prospective immigrant is spared a trip to this country and his return home without being allowed to land because the quota of nationals of his particular country allowed to enter America under the new immigration law had been filled before the immigrant's arrival here. The provision for culling immigrants abroad was laid down by Congress in an effort to facilitate operation of the immigration laws, and there is little prospect that the rigid rule requiring passport visas will be rescinded, it is said.

Other nations adopted the custom of requiring visas on passports soon after the American law went into effect, but their action was rather in the nature of a retaliation for what was believed to be an undue hardship imposed on their subjects by the American regulation, it is said, and sentiment abroad is veering to the belief that retaliation has not paid and it would be well to make travel as convenient for visitors—American and others—as possible. The action of Belgium and Switzerland was cited in support of that belief, inasmuch as those two countries decided to remove restrictions from American travelers without demanding a reciprocal arrangement.

Whites Guilty Of Atrocities—Dalta

(Dalta News Agency)

Chita, March 6.—An official commission of the representatives of the Amur District Administration, the Blagoveschensk City Administration, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Chinese Consulate as well as representatives of the press and of the medical profession, has returned from an investigation at Kasakevichevo station.

The commission has established that when Kassakevichevo was occupied by the White General Suharov, his detachment captured 28 soldiers of the People's Revolutionary Army, whose bodies were afterwards found 5 verats from the station. The bodies were mutilated to an extent which made it absolutely impossible to name them.

The Japanese Military Mission was also requested to join the investigation commission, but it declined.

TRADING WITH ASIA

A Book Which Covers the Field

"Trading With Asia" is designed to supply the necessary understanding of Oriental affairs. It shows what business can be done in Asia, and in what fashion trade can be conducted. It analyzes the Asiatic market, showing what is produced by each country, and what each country is anxious to purchase in return. It considers the natural resources and the possibilities for investment. It is, moreover, a complete study of the history, politics and present financial condition of each Oriental nation and colony. Thus it describes the very factors which make Oriental trade so different from American or European.

Financing The Films

Motion Pictures No Longer Poor Man's Game; Part Played By The Banks

BY F. M. TODD

While there may be no figures to support the statement, it is said by those th.. have long observed operations in the motion picture field that more money has been lost in the movies than was ever lost in oil. To the mere middle class imagination that is an incomprehensible amount of money. Perhaps this warning should have been embodied in another article but the writer has never found it necessary to caution bankers about making loans; on the contrary——

The poor man's chance in an industry is when it is new. The movies are no exception to the rule that as an industry advances and enlarges it takes more and more capital to finance it. Early methods are cheap, but improvements cost money, and competition makes them necessary. The movies were, at first, a poor man's game. They are so no longer. And the costs have mounted so that it is difficult, although not impossible, to do business on individual capital. The power of banks derived from collected deposits has become necessary.

Bankers that have watched the game understand that, and some of them are well versed in the producer's requirements. Their problem, if they are to assist financing, is that of security; which may depend on a number of factors varying with the individual piece projected, but of which economy of production is almost invariably one.

They are saying now that star salaries are too high and must come down, that directors must plan their work better, and that extravagance in sets must be curtailed. They note an evolutionary tendency in the business in common with such hard-headed enterprises as steel and copper—an effort to combine all processes under one control. A banker that has been carefully studying this process and every other process involved thus illustrated it, as well as some other elements of the financial problem:

TENDENCY TO COMBINE

"This combining tendency in organization resembles the evolution of the United States Steel Corporation, which owns its ore beds and coke retorts and lays down the product complete, or an oil company that owns its wells, refineries and distributing stations, or the Anaconda Copper Company, which is acquiring the American Brass Works to absorb its whole output.

"With these changes will necessarily come economies that appear to have been overlooked in the rush of new development. Of course, it is very difficult to know just how far and when it is safe to interfere in the creative processes of an artist. But some of these directors will have to learn to figure more closely, and when they get a mob together for a mob scene, for example, to make all their mob scenes instead of dismissing and reassembling.

"Of course, I'm only a banker, not a movie director; but I am satisfied that there has been tremendous waste in some of the productions. Two things any banker should know, before lending money for production. One is, who is to be the director; and the other how the distribution is arranged. If there are no good and effective plans and contracts for distribution, the most meritorious picture may rest on a shelf indefinitely and never make a cent."

CANNOT PREDICT VALUE.

Another financial man said: "How are we to tell about this line of goods? What we are offered is a large tin can said to contain a picture that will gross a million. If it were a can of prunes, we should know instantly how much it was worth—could tell it by looking at the market reports in the paper, if in no other way. The can of films may be worth a million or it may be worth less than prunes running so to the pound. Every can of them is different. The public has to grade them and there is no telling what it will do."

Outside the banks, there are financing corporations, formed and forming, to advance money to independent producers and the great companies. And nobody knows how many fond fathers there are who have made their money in the lumber business and are willing that son should fritter away some of it trying to make a million out of a few thousand; or how many old gentlemen there are about the country who are interested in young women they think would "film well" and are willing and eager to put money behind their judgment of grace and pulchritude.

Average costs show little in this most venturesome business. An average of a number of films might indicate an expenditure of $100,000 apiece; yet most pictures cost less than $10,000, while some cost $300,000.

Sets cost a great deal. A glass fall in a Cinderella scene in one of the great studios called for an outlay of $15,000; and it is said that the Frohman temple in the Fotheringham dramatic spectacle "A Bride of the Gods," cost $40,000. As for returns, it is the general understanding that "The Birth of a Nation" has grossed well over $6,000,000, and that "Way Down East" has earned since its release in September, 1920, about $2,179,000 gross. One authority declares that two or three Cecil de Mille productions have grossed over a million apiece. George Loan Tucker's "Miracle Man" gathered more than $2,000,000. "Humoresque" is in the million class and so is "Hearts of the World." "The Kid" has made its $2,000,000; "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," with a negative costing more than $620,000, has taken in its first million and is well on its way to the second.

OVER-CAPITALISATION

Over-capitalisation has hurt picture credit, as it will in time hurt the credit of any industry. One picture made in New York issued $2,500,000 worth of stock to some 15,000 stockholders, and did not bring in $75,000.

Financing methods have fluctuated, like all the other conditions of this mutable game. During the war there was a great shortage of production, and the distributing companies, which form a commercially necessary link between the producer and the exhibitor, were willing to advance money for production; sometimes for the whole cost of the negative. Today they are not advancing much, except on old contracts. With rare exceptions, distributors do not buy pictures outright, and the tendency now is for them to act as brokers only, the producer financing his own venture, the distributor selling and dividing on an agreed proportion with the producer. When pictures are bought outright by the distributor, it is on a price arrived at by experimenting, where houses and exhibiting costs are known quantities.

Early in the business the terms for financing by distributors were quite onerous, because the independent producer had practically no other resource. As the banks, however, have learned more about the business, and as the business has endeavored to stabilise itself and effect economies, financing is growing easier. It is felt that safer financing, and hence, easier in terms, will follow the numerous consolidations that are taking place. Distributors as well as producers are amalgamating into larger and stronger companies.

Under present practice, a bank, before lending money to a producer, is likely to insist on his putting up 30 percent of the cost of the production, or what he thinks will be the cost. The bank immediately takes an assignment of the picture and all prints, and so has a first lien on the production. This may be recorded as a chattel mortgage. The distributor will remit to the bank the producer's full share of the gross receipts. It is said to be banking experience that picture loans are soon extinguished under this arrangement. Properly qualified movie loans have actually been rediscounted by Federal Reserve banks; and the officials of the Federal Reserve system are themselves beginning to study the industry with a view to intelligent rediscount.

WANTED: A MOVIE "PIT"

All that seems lacking to prompt financial action on motion pictures is a motion picture stock market pit, where movies could be traded in and bids shouted by brokers for "Four Horsemen," "Two Hearts That Beat" or "Foolish Husbands."

There is no other easy method of arriving at values. It cannot be done by saying a film took so many hours to make, or that it contains so many feet. The pictures are showing all the mingled elements of human life and experience, with every variation man can invent, and such material refuses to reduce itself to value in dollars. It may have none.

Costs are easier to learn. Some of the more important producers have, with the aid of expert accountants, worked out the average proportionate costs of the several major factors in a production. Ambitious scenario authors may find quite a jolt in the last item. Here are the percentages the cost of each division of the work bears to the whole:

Salaries: Regular cast, extras, staff, including director and assistants; technical workers (electricians, mechanics, and the like) and laborers, 61 percent.

Film: Negative, developing, printing, cutting and patching, 14 percent.

Properties: Including rental, purchase and damage, 13 percent.

Wardrobe: Rental, purchase and damage, 5 percent.

Sets: Material and supplies, 3 percent.

Location expense: Temporary rental, fees, park license, etc., 2 percent.

Expenses incidental to "props" and wardrobe, 1 percent.

Scenaries: One percent.

Russia May Discard Her Ballet Dancing

Soviets Growing Tired Of Raising Money To Maintain Entertainments

Moscow, Jan. 14.—Russia's greatest sport, the ballet, is threatened with extinction. The various municipal soviets are tiring of the deficit which they have to make up in order to keep the operas and the ballets going.

Ballet and opera alternate in the big theaters. The ballet pays, but doesn't make enough profit to carry the opera, and the great orchestras necessary to satisfy the music-loving Russians.

Ballerinas are the subjects of endless discussion.

Families break up over differences about the merits of Smirnova, Geiser, Gerdt and others who are now holding the spotlight in Petrograd and Moscow. To a lesser degree the same battle rages at Kazan and Kiev and Odessa. Just at the moment Luken is the hot favorite in Petrograd and Geiser in Moscow.

Youth and beauty do not count with Russian ballet fans. It matters not if the ballerina is old. In fact, she generally has to be fairly mature before she can master the intricate steps upon which Russians give points. She may have muscles which give her the appearance of a strong lady in the circus and still fascinate Russian spectators if she can spin fast enough on her toes and shift her weight from one big toe to the other at just the moment prescribed by the rules.

Geiser, the strongly featured player of the Moscow circuit, recently fell on the stage and had to beat a retreat before catcalls and howls which made it impossible for her to reappear for a fortnight.

Russian ballet fans are as merciless as the crowds at a Spanish bullfight. There are no excuses for failure.

Bans Husband As Housekeeper

London, Jan. 14.—A young wife complained to a magistrate that her husband had reserved to himself the duty of housekeeping, and that she couldn't eat the food he bought.

The lawyer for the defense argued that the husband has the right to do the housekeeping if he chooses, but the magistrate didn't agree.

Bryan's Bible Talk

Faith Declared the Force That Makes Man the Beneficiary of God's Bounty

By William Jennings Bryan

"AND it fell on a day, that Elisha passed to Shunem, where was a great woman; and she constrained him to eat bread."

So begins the story of the Shunammite woman whose kindness and faith God rewarded through his prophet according to the faith that was in her.

A great woman—where before in history do we find that word applied to a woman, and where outside of the Bible has woman been honored as she is in Holy Writ?

Beside this Shunammite woman, who exhibited a cluster of the highest virtues—reverence, hospitality, implicit faith, and profound gratitude—the Bible has immortalised many other good women.

The Old Testament tells of Sarah, Rebekah, Rachel, Deborah, Ruth and Naomi, Vashti and Esther, and many others.

In the New Testament we read of a generous widow who with two mites purchased more enduring fame than any other person has been able to buy with unlimited means; of the Tabitha, whose deeds of kindness called forth one of the most eloquent of eulogies; of Martha, who expressed her trust in that classic lament, "Lord, if thou hadst been here my brother had not died," and of the woman whose alabaster box of ointment has spread its fragrance over the centuries. And above and beyond all these, and all others, Mary, chosen for the sacred task of mothering the Savior.

POWER OF GODLY WOMEN

In our own day and in every land great women can be found—nowhere are they more numerous or more beloved than in the United States. In the church, in society, in politics they have made their power felt as they have demonstrated the possession of those virtues that disclose a likeness to Him in whose image we are made.

The one woman to whom our nation has thus far paid the hightest honor is Frances Willard, who was so conspicuous in all three lines of work that her statue graces the Hall of Fame in Washington.

While history, sacred and profane, has written high the names of a few women, we must not forget the un-numbered multitude who, just as reverent, as hospitable, as full of faith and as generous in their expressions of gratitude, have glorified womanhood by embodying the best that there is in humanity.

"And it fell on a day, that Elisha passed to Shunem, where was a great woman; and she constrained him to eat bread. And so it was, that as often as he passed by, he turned in thither to eat bread."

The road from Gilgal to Mount Carmel, which the prophet often had occasion to take on God's business, led by this woman's home. After Elisha had thus become a frequent visitor at the home, the woman said to her husband:

"Behold now, I perceive that this is an holy man of God, which passeth by us continually. Let us make a little chamber, I pray thee, on the wall; and let us set for him there a bed, and a table, and a stool, and a candlestick; and it shall be, when he cometh to us, that he shall turn in thither."

ONE OF WOMAN'S JEWELS

It was a kind thought, just such a thought as has inspired millions of women who have added to the comfort of God's servants. Men do think of these things, but the home has ever been woman's throne and her hospitality has been one of the jewels in her crown.

The prophet, anxious to make some suitable return for the woman's generous thoughtfulness, sent for her and said:

"Behold, thou hast been careful for us with all this care; what is to be done for thee? Wouldst thou be spoken for to the king, or to the captain of the host?"

He suggested the rewards that would ordinarily be acceptable. He was in a position to secure for her whatever her heart might wish. She modestly declined anything that king or captain could give, preferring, she said, to dwell with her own people.

When she had gone Elisha asked Gehezi if he could think of anything that could be done for her. The prophet's servant answered that she had no child, the greatest misfortune that could befall her. Then Elisha called her and told her that a son would come to bless her. The woman could hardly believe him and in her joy begged him not to lie to her.

In due time the son was born, and when the child was old enough to help in the harvest he went out into the field with the reapers and fell sick, probably overcome by the heat. The father, feeling as helpless as fathers usually do at such a time, had the lad carried to his mother.

Text Of Todays Talk

(II Kings 4:18-23, 27, 30, 32-37)

And when the child was grown, it fell on a day, that he went out to his fathers to the reapers.

And he said unto his father, My head, my head. And he said to a lad, Carry him to his mother.

And when he had taken him, and brought him to his mother, he sat on her knees till noon, and then he died.

And she went up, and laid him on the bed of the man of God, and shut the door upon him, and went out.

And she called unto her husband, and said, Send me, I pray thee, one of the young men, and one of the asses, that I may run to the man of God, and come again.

And when she come to the man of God to the hill, she caught him by the feet; but Gehazi came near to thurst her away. And the man of God said, Let her alone; for her soul is vexed within her; and the Lord hath hid it from me, and hath not told me.

And the mother of the child said, As the Lord liveth, and as my soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And he arose, and followed her.

And when Elisha was come into the house, behold, the child was dead, and laid upon his bed.

He went in therefore, and shut the door upon them twain, and prayed unto the Lord.

And he went up, and lay upon the child, and put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, and his hands upon his hands: and he stretched himself upon the child; and the flesh of the child waxed warm.

Then he returned, and walked in the house to and fro; and went up, and stretched himself upon him: and the child sneezed seven times, and the child opened his eyes.

And he called Gehazi, and said, Call this Shunammite. So he called her. And when she was come in unto him, he said, Take up thy son.

Then she went in, and fell at his feet, and bowed herself to the ground, and took up her son, and went out.

The mother nursed her son until he died upon her lap.

In her grief, there was just one person to whom she could turn—Elisha. She took the child up to his room and laying him on the prophet's bed, she shut the door upon him and went out.

Her plans were made in an instant. Calling her husband, she asked for a servant and an animal upon which to go in search of Elisha. The father did not seem to guess the purpose of her visit; possibly he did not think that the son's illness was so serious, or, if he had known that he was dead, he might not have had the faith she had in the prophet's power.

She found Elisha in Mount Carmel, who, seeing her afar of, sent his servant to inquire what was the matter. Answering in the usual language, "It is well," she hurried past the servant and fell at the feet of Elisha.

Gehazi, of whom we shall hear more and worse, later, tried to thrust her away but Elisha rebuked him, seeing that something distressed her—something which he said the Lord had not revealed to him. In her anguish, she reminded the prophet that she had not asked a son—that she had even begged him not to deceive her.

REWARD FOR HER FAITH

Elisha, correctly interpreting her words, sent Gehazi with his staff to restore the child to life, warning him not to delay by the way to give or to receive salutations.

Rev. Herbert Booth, a son of the founder of the Salvation Army, has a sermon on the Shunammite Woman. In his inimitable way he describes Gehazi as he departed on this errand tuned up with a feeling of importance; and when he describes Gehazi's surprise when he found himself unable to use Elisha's staff as successfully as the prophet used it.

The Shunammite woman did not seem to have as much faith in Gehazi as the servant had in himself. She did not follow him when he started toward her home carrying Elisha's staff. She remained with Elisha and used the same language that Elisha had employed in addressing his master Elijah: "As the Lord liveth and as thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee."

So the prophet went with her.

Somewhere along the twelve-mile journey they met the returning servant and received from him the report that his mission was a failure. In due time Elisha reached the woman's home and looked upon the child as he lay upon the bed. Then follows the record of the miracle. The scene closes with the mother bowing to the ground in gratitude and

Make Marriage Harder, Divorce Easier And Sanction 'Temporary Unions,' Urges Woman Author

Here is a new way out for the modern girl and the youth who are unable to stand the strain of celibacy, who are repelled by free love, and look on marriage as a bore. The world is full of such people, says Mrs. C. Gasquoine Hartley, the proponent of the new social remedy, a London author and educator. They are the victims of "wild love," of childless marriages, of illegitimate parentage, and all other kindred evils.

"Friendship-contracts" is the title she gives the plan in her book, "Women's Wild Oats," which is attracting the thoughtful attention of sociologists and psychologists in America. And this is the way Mrs. Hartley defines the proposed panacea:

"An open recognition of unions outside of marriage would prevent the present easy escape on the part of so many men and women from responsible conduct in these unregulated relationships. It is because I believe this that I am advocating this course, which will not make immorality easier, but will rather impose definite obligations where now none exist.

"TEMPORARY UNIONS"

"I would let those who do not desire marriage be permitted openly to live together in honorable temporary unions. Surely this is the wisest arrangement for the man and woman worker who do not want children, and who, not wishing for the bondage of continuous companionship, desire to pass their lives in liberty.

"It is possible that in some cases such friendship-contracts might serve as preliminary to marriage, while under our present disastrous conditions they might also be made by those who are unsuitably mated and yet are unable or do not wish to sever the bond with some other partner. Such contracts would open up possibilities of honorable relations to many who are now driven into shameful and secret unions.

"The whole question of any such relationship outside of marriage in the past has been left in the gutters, so to speak, made disreputable by the shames of concealment. There will always be, for a very long time at least, men and women who will be attracted to wild love. This we have to recognise. No one, however, need be driven into the dark paths of irresponsible love."

Girls of today, thousands and thousands of them, are headed toward moral destruction, Mrs. Hartley argues. The economic independence they gained during the war has unbalanced them, the author contends, and something must be done about it before all society is adversely affected by the condition.

"A confusion of values has led women astray. Being a woman is a handicap.

"I tell you women everywhere among us are being starved of sacrifice and service.

MARRIAGE A "DRAWBACK?"

"Marriage is spoken of as 'one of women's industrial drawbacks,' and it is said that it makes her less 'ambitious and enterprising.'

"The war is over and with it the pressing need for women's and girls' work, but the consequences of the war period are far indeed, from nearing their end. We are now facing the certainty of widespread unemployment among women and girls.

"We have heard so much of the splendid conduct of women and the wonderful way they have done the work of men, but the facts stand up stark. Women have had a good time. Now, they are going to struggle to keep it. The girls are vastly more rebellious than any women were five years ago.

"See them parading the streets; they are the companions of every soldier. Who has altered the fashions about every three months? Why, the munition workers and the forty shillings a week girls! The factory girl has taken to silk stockings and lingerie and the lady to calico and balbriggan.

"What is likely to happen now when the full years of war change to the empty years of peace? No longer able to spend in the way to which their high wages have made them accustomed, girls will seek to get presents from men; they will want excitement and the dress and the pleasures to satisfy that need, also to hold the envy of their friends.

"The weaker girl will prefer to sell her body rather than go back to the hum-drum life of dtudgery in the backkitchens. It is well that we should remember that if women are to suffer from men's passions, men will suffer no less from women's greed."

FOR QUICK DIVORCES

It is high time, Mrs. Hartley holds, for a social readjustment to meet the changing conditions. She pleads that marriage be made more difficult, that divorce be made quick, simple and painless. The future of marriage is in the hands of women, the author declares, and then describes some of the types of womanhood, thus:

"I tell you that they are dissatisfied because the soul of woman is crushed, unable to come up from its dark hiding, and breathe the sun and light to see that life is good. Why cannot the old faith come back?

"Marriage is not a religion to us; it is a sport! We require a character with our butler or cook, we engage an expert to test the drains of our house, but in marriage we take no such sensible precautions, and we even pride ourselves that we do not take them.

"FALLING IN LOVE"

"We speak of falling in love, and we do fall! The conventions are sacred; nothing else matters. We stand for purity, which means with women, ignorance, and with men, silence and discretion.

"It is women and they alone who can save marriage; they hold all life in their hands. Never before in the world has the opportunity been so vast.

"Marriage has ceased to be a discipline; it has become an experiment. Romance necessarily leads to license and not license of the body alone.

"I plead for an open recognition of honorable partnerships outside of marriage.

"Divorce is a relief from misfortune, not a crime, to quote from the admirable statute book of Norway."

Mrs. Hartley paints woman as the worst sinner in love intrigues and man the profecting, chivalrous dupe of her deceit. And to emphasise this contention, she asks:

"Where is this wild love going to end?"

Then she says:

"The condition of the streets is such that it is not safe to let any young man or boy walk about, because of the dressed up, flighty girls who have earned big wages in the last four years and now are feeling the want of money to spend on dress and pleasure. Modern girls are out to get all they can, and by any means.

"Woman possesses the sacred right of protecting man; it is a duty imposed upon her by nature and one that she cannot safely escape. The essential fact in every relationship of the sexes is the woman's power over the man and it is the misuse of that power that leads to wrong.

"Most men, it is true, are not only tolerant of women's wiles—they like them. But most men, I believe, succumb against their will and often against their inclination to this tyranny. Men's chivalry, as well as their pride, has woven a cloak of silence around this question. This silence has protected women—even the worst!

"All over the world women are restless. Perhaps in no direction is this shown more alarmingly than in the attitude of many girls toward marriage and motherhood.

MORALITY ON DECLINE?

"Women are the worst sinners. At every opportunity the women of my generation have been insisting on 'the monstrous exaggerations of the claims of sex.'

"The old convention that irregular love is excusable in the case of the man, but always to be punished in the case of the woman will never again be accepted, at least not by women. The irregular unions, now so common, are but the more intimate aspect of a general attitude toward life.

"These dissatisfied women must either marry or must continue lawless careers unregulated, each one acting according to her own fancy. There is at present no third course!"

The Pneumonia Month.

March is a typical pneumonia month and usually gives a high rate of mortality for the disease. After a long and hard winter, the system loses much of its resistance and people grow careless. When every cold, no matter how slight, is given prompt and intelligent attention, there is much less danger of pneumonia. It should be borne in mind that pneumonia is a germ disease and breeds in the throat. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is an expectorant and cleans out the germ ladened mucus and not only cures a cold but prevents its resulting in pneumonia. It is pleasant to take. Children take it willingly.

Amazing Gyrations Of Dollar On Continent Stuns Travelers

BY WILBUR FORREST

If Alice of Wonderland fame—now, of course, quite grown up and remaining extremely blase after her experiences in the rabbit's burrow—could step into Europe today as a respectable American traveler she might work up considerable interest in the paradoxes of European exchanges. The characters in the rabbit's dugout, their strange appearance and conversation somehow drift into obscurity beside the gymnastic gentleman of American origin known while on tour in Europe generally as "dolair," and his remarkable power for throwing the European lucre family into mathematical gyrations that make your head whirl.

European experts within their various borders have been trying to discipline the mark, the lire, crown, the two-franc cousins—French and Belgian—and others, to keep their feet when the American gentleman draws near, so far without little success. They suffer everything from aggravated pep to palpitation of the heart, sleeping sickness, locomotor ataia, dropsy, spots before the eyes and all the maladies contained in symptoms of inflation, deflation and reaction.

European specialists are performing operations around the clock, usually with a printing press, but they have yet to fix the patient so that he doesn't contract a violent fit of colly-wobbles every time the "do-lair" comes to town.

At home the "do-lair" is fairly docile, even though carrying such odious aliases as "berry," "plunk," "bean" and "buck," but bring him to Europe and he is so full of jazz that he can't hold still. In some European localities he is a fair imitation of a whirling dervish.

To Americans traveling on the Continent Austria is the prize paradox, though topsy-turvy conditions prevail most everywhere. A dollar expands to the pre-war equivalent of between $800 and $1,000 in Vienna, or between 4,000 and 5,000 crowns. According to the fluctuating rate of exchange it requires between 40 and 50 crowns to count the once well known American penny.

An American business man recently paid one-eighth of a cent for a shave in Vienna, tipped the barber a penny, then sauntered down the street to a large fur shop, where the proprietor asked him 6,000,000 crowns for a coat he was interested in for his wife. The American bought a copy of the New York Tribune on a newsstand for 700 crowns—less than 15 cents—and read that St. Louis fur manipulators were boosting the price of furs at home. He then returned to the fur store with an idea of buying the exquisite 6,000,000 crown article. The proprietor apologetically informed him that he had made a mistake in the original price and that the coat in question would cost 8,000,000 crowns.

Perhaps the furrier had read the New York Tribune, too.

The American paid his bill at Vienna's best hotel the following day, a matter of $5 for a week's lodging in an excellent room, and departed. A few days later in Paris he read that a large mob of Vienna workmen of reddish tendency had sacked the business center of the Austrian capital, including the fur shop with its marvelous coat of performing crowns.

In Europe meals are served table d'hote in dining cars in three stages. Those with early hunger may eat luncheon, for example, at 11:30 o'clock. Other sittings come at 12:30 and 1:30, respectively.

The first series is not popular with travelers en route from Switzerland into Austria, via the Zurich-Vienna line. It takes a ravenous hunger to drive a passenger into the dining car while the train is still rolling on Swiss territory. It usually crosses the Austro-Swiss boundary about time for the second series. It costs money to avoid the rush, and it is the late bird that captures the worm. Luncheon in Switzerland costs five Swiss francs—about $1. Once in Austria the dining car steward demands 600 crowns. To a Swiss this is 60 centimes, or about six-tenths of one of his francs. To an Austrian it is rank prodigality in any case and to an American it is about 12 cents.

It is not only Americans, Swiss and Hollanders whose moneys expand beyond all reason when they enter Austria, seen with money to burn. Certain numbers of Viennese themselves are observed occasionally lighting a 2,000-crown cigar with a 1,000-crown note. This species of Viennese make their money in sort of presto fashion by speculation. They dine at the Bristol or at Sacher's for 5,000 or 6,000 crowns a plate, spend a few thousand crowns on automobile riding after dinner and wind up at the opera with a 1,500-crown seat. Later they sup in mediocre imitations of Montmartre and pay up to 12,000 crowns a bottle for acidy wines.

The Viennese who splurge in this fashion while poor archdukes live in poverty, thrive on the disorders of exchanges through hectic speculation. Late in October the dollar was worth 3,000 crowns. Early in November it was worth 5,000. The speculators made so much money in fifteen days that the expense of carting it from one place to another was an item. They made 40 percent. When the crown falls they hold on. When it goes up they profit and splurge.

The Archduke Rainer is an automobile salesman in Vienna. He trades the privilege of mixing with his "imperial highness" for good profits, and gets them.

An Austrian housewife told an American in Vienna recently that the purchasing power of her paper crowns had become so fickle that she frequently has to cancel an order for meat given in the morning, because by the time the delivery boy is at the door the price has aviated beyond the reach of the household pocketbook. Fish used to be the substitute for meat, but since the Czechs stopped the fishing in the Danube the price has gone up 250 crowns a pound. Without fish or meat the poorer householder of Austria's paradoxical capital must fall back on vegetables. Rutsbaga is the chief one available, and it costs 20 crowns a pound. Farmers who bring in meat and eggs often decline pay in paper crowns, demanding instead clothing, pianos, bric-a-brac or other necessities or non-necessities, in accordance with individual whim.

The gift of an American dollar to an Austrian is the most precious gift available. And his or her enthusiasm rises or falls with the rate of exchange.

An American crossing the border of Austria back into Switzerland finds his Austrian currency shrivel and deflate to almost pre-war quantities of Swiss francs. But the dollar as reckoned in Switzerland inflates again as the Franco-Swiss border is crossed. For every Swiss franc there are two and a half French francs, whereof fourteen or thereabouts represent one dollar.

Even Little Rollo—if he has been travelling in France this last year—might answer for the dollar in this republic. Does the 14-franc equivalent of the dollar buy any more than the five-franc equivalent formerly bought in Paris? The answer, Rollo, is, it does not. The gymastic dollar in Paris buys a dollar's worth, most generally. Mr. Hylan might be interested to know, however, that the Paris subways have succeeded in raising their fares, and still the ride—as far as from Bronx Park to Brooklyn Bridge—costs all the way from two to three and a half cents, according to whether there is blue, red or green paint on the cars—first, second and third class. Taxis are cheaper in Paris than in New York and gasoline is more expensive. Good beefsteaks cost a lot, but, like New York, the price depends on where they are bought or eaten. Good grade, A1 snails are cheaper in Paris than in New York. Wheat, corn and oats cost about the same. Rye, bourbon, Scotch, cognac, can de vie, vin rouge and vin blanc are considerably better and far better in quality.

It requires a visit to the Rue de la Paix—the Fifth Avenue of Paris—however, to find that the dollar can, among its other accomplishments, give a very good imitation of the disappearing act a la New York schedules, and the spender is wiser after he has passed the New York customs officials and paid Uncle Sam's tax on his "Christmas gifts." If he has spent a considerable sum on perfume in the Rue de la Paix Uncle Sam desires just 60 percent, as on some other luxuries from that same quarter.

Whatever the antics of the dollar in France, pass it over the border into Germany and watch it expand from its 14 francs into nearly 250 marks of varying purchase power. Roll it over the Austrian border again in the form of German marks and the expansion becomes something like the difference between the rolling snowball at the beginning and after a good roll. It gathers bulk as it passes from Austria into Poland and becomes unmanageable once over the Polish line in Soviet Russia.

Not counting Russian rubles, a financial expert, using figures of current exchanges three months ago, has figured that the possessor of 500,000 Polish marks would be worth about $100. Passing these bales of Polish paper into Austrian crowns he would then own about 100,000 of these—just enough for a Viennese speculator to have a one-night fling in his own capital. Taking his 100,000 Austrian crowns into Germany at that time would give him about 11,000 German marks. From Germany to Belgium or France, however, the German paper dwindled to 1,400 Belgian or French francs. A trip across the channel to England at the time the expert made his computations gave the owner of $100 just 540 shillings, or 27 pounds sterling.

Visitors to General Allen's Rhineland territory generally agree that Wall Street probably will be invaded by these American troops when they do return home. There are hundreds of post-war doughboys in Coblenz who are watching the rate of exchange between the dollar and the mark closer than the "Wacht am Rhein," or a Wall Street broker watches his ticker.

The American soldier is paid once a month in the acrobatic American dollar. Let the mark show a sign of wavering downward and he goes to a German bank and converts the pay check. Then he sits back with a paper and pencil and watches his dollars expand. If the exchange is against him he waits. When it is sufficiently in his favor he buys dollars again.

One private has manipulated his roll at a profit of $600 during the last two months. Others of lesser investment tendencies have "cleaned up," especially during the recent fluctuations, which were more violent than usual.

The exchange game also is a favorite sport with officers, who go into in on a larger scale than the men, due to larger pay envelopes. German banks in Coblenz, once they know the investor, are even willing to margin without collateral.

As one soldier remarked in Paris: "Why should we want to go home when the banks of the Rhine are so interesting?"

A WONDER-WORKING GOD

We see in the story of the Shunammite woman an exhibition of the power of the Almighty, and as usual, the power is called forth by faith.

Here are present the three factors that appear again and again throughout the Old and New Testaments. A God, all powerful, acting through a consecrated servant, rewards the faith of one in whose heart there is an unfaltering trust.

A miracle? Yes—but why should a miracle disturb a Christian?

Christianty rests upon a wonder working God, on a Bible full of miracles and upon a Christ who displayed supernatural power. Without faith it is impossible to be a Christian, and the same faith that leads one to believe in the virgin birth of Christ and in His resurrection leads to a belief in the miracles performed by the Son of God and by those before His day upon whom the Father bestowed power.

If one discards one miracle he is likely to discard them all, for the very simple reason that miracles are usually discarded, not upon evidence or for lack of evidence, but upon the assumption that no such thing as a miracle is possible.

This objection is traceable, as we have shown in a previous talk, to one of two propositions, namely, that God cannot perform a miracle, which is equivalent to saying that there is no God; or that God would not perform a miracle, which is based upon an assumption of intelligence equal to that of the Creator Himself. This objection, when it is analyzed, differs but little from the first and is a virtual denial of God, for a God who has no plans or purposes that the finite mind cannot comprehend is Himself finite.

The Christian, believing in a God who can do anything, is prepared to admit the supernatural when the evidence of it is sufficient, and the evidence presented by the Bible is sufficient for the Christian. The Bible being accepted as unimpeachable authority, the Bible characters are real characters because they are Bible characters. Their power is a real power because it comes from a living God. Faith is the force that turns on the current and makes man the beneficiary of God's bounty.

PAUL'S TRIBUTE TO FAITH

In the eleventh chapter of Hebrews Paul pays a wonderful tribute to faith, which he defines as "the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

He gives illustrations of faith, beginning with the faith that enables us to understand that the words were framed by the word of God. He represents faith as the effective force in Abel's sacrifice, in Enoch's translation, and in Noah's translation, and in Noah's preparation for the flood.

To Abraham's faith he traces the founding of a race and of a religion. It was by faith that Isaac triumphed and that Jacob secured a blessing.

By faith Moses led the children of Israel out of bondage. It was faith that inspired Gideon and Barak and Samson and David and the prophets.

He tells how faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire and escaped the edge of the sword—how men out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight and turned to flight the armies of the aliens. And in the 35th verse he evidently refers to the Shunammite woman: he speaks of women who received their dead raised to life again.

There are few instances in the Bible of greater faith than was shown by the great woman of Shunem. The record of her life began with gracious hospitality and ended in the joy of a mother whose child was called back from the grave. "According to your faith be it unto you."

Economic Situation Is Basis Of Indian Unrest

Dissatisfaction With Government Is Secondary; Unnatural Alliance Of Hindus And Moslems Adds To The Political Complications

BY HAROLD E. SCARBOROUGH

The visit of the Prince of Wales to India has focused interest on that country to a degree unprecedented in recent years. Yet, despite the thousands of words cabled by the correspondents accompanying the Prince the average Englishman has about as definite an idea of the Indian Empire as the average American has of the Philippines. Both know that there are countries somewhere over on the other side of the earth from which white men occasionally return with malaria and tremendous thirsts, and both have vague impressions that the natives in these countries are more or less dissatisfied, and that the lives of colonial administrators must be tiresome ones.

Yet there are many men in London who know Calcutta and Simla and Madras far better than they know Birmingham or Edinburgh. And most of these men agree that, while the Indian situation is "complicated," India is by no means ready to cast off the British sovereignty, or even to reproduce on any serious scale the Mutiny of 1857.

The primary cause of Indian unrest, these men say, is not a sudden dissatisfaction with Great Britain and all her ways and works, nor is it even the culmination of a long series of feelings of resentment at foreign domination. It is just the same thing that is bothering New York and London today: economic instability, the legacy of the war.

The Indian equation, as these men see it, is simple. When prices are low and work plentiful there is contentment. When prices go up and jobs are scarce there is discontent. At the present time the later situation obtains in India, with the result that agitators find plastic material where with to work.

THE BASIS OF TROUBLE

The economic situation—high prices and unemployment—may be regarded as the fundamental basis of India's disturbed state of mind. Add to this an unnatural alliance between Hindus and Moslems over the fancied wrongs of Turkey and a series of unfortunate repressive measures by the government, culminating in the famous Amritsar massacre, and you have the main ingredients of the Indian trouble. Discontent with British rule is a natural corollary, but it is noteworthy that, excepting in a very few cases, the agitators have not made the expulsion of the British a part of their platform.

"But is not a movement aimed directly at driving out the British—and all foreigners—a natural consequence of the present state of affairs?" an Indian authority in London was asked.

"I do not think so," he replied. "In my opinion, the worst of the Indian trouble is past. It is true that the economic situation has not yet become normal and may even be worse. But, there is to be considered the fact that the Indian Legislative Assembly, despite the efforts of the non-co-operators, has become a reality, and that, while the new Indian constitution does not give as great a measure of autonomy as is offered to the Irish, it nevertheless moves the Indians a great step forward in self-government. One very tangible result is that distribution of official positions under the new government has begun, and that some of the malcontents are begining to wonder whether defiance and disorder pay as well as orderliness and good government jobs.

"Moreover, I consider the Prince of Wales's visit to have been of the highest benefit. Indians of all classes have a profound respect for the King-Emperor—far greater than they have for any constitution or legislative assembly—and the presence of the Prince denotes to them that their King has not forgotten them."

What is this India which has steadily been forcing its way into the news of the day?

The Indian States, which occupy a continent as varied in climate characteristics and inhabitants as is North America, fall into two main divisions. The greater part of the country has been until very recently under the direct control of Great Britain, which, through the Viceroy and his Council, exercised what is known as Crown Colony government. That is, British India was ruled not through the medium of local or provincial legislatures, but by British administrators, appointed by the central government. The native states, on the contrary, have exercised a great measure of autonomy. Attached to the courts of each of the native rulers there was a British political agent.

"If the state in which he found himself was well governed," remarked an Englishman who had long resided in India, "the political agent got in quite a bit of shooting and tennis, but had very little work. If the administration was mediocre he stuck close to his post, and suggested this or that line of action. If the government was really bad he reported it to Simla, and soon there was a new ruler in that province. The English didn't depose the inefficient one; it generally happened that the people themselves, somehow or other, discovered that they needed a change!"

PLOTS ALWAYS IN PROGRESS

Until the war was well advanced this system worked fairly well. There were always minor plots in progress against the government and a few bombs were thrown each year, but these affairs were discounted in advance and didn't worry anybody very much.

The conclusion of the war, although it removed the menace of a vast imperialistic Russia on the northern frontier, did not remove the Russian peril. Bolshevism succeeded Czarism, and its subversive influence made itself felt not only in Caucasus and in Afghanistan, but also in the northern provinces of India itself. The peace treaty, partitioning the Ottoman Empire and temporarily depriving the Turk of sovereignty over Constantinople, also gave the Indian Mahometans a grievance to air.

Since 1917 there have been three serious phases of Indian internal disorder. In that year there occurred the Arrah riots, which were fierce, organised attempts by Hindus to drive the Mahometans out of Bihar. In the spring of 1919 the Punjab riots, furthered by cleverly circulated propaganda that the British power had been weakened by the war, took place. Last year in southern India the Moplah uprisings broke out. These were dictated by the belief that Britain was primarily responsible for the troubles of Turkey, and the Moplahs, a Mahometan sect, hoped to terrorise the British government into a revision of the Turkish position.

There are numerous varieties of Indian agitators, but those who are causing most trouble at present are of two kinds. First, come men such as Mahatma Gandhi, low-caste Hindu, ascetic prophet and idealist, who at the moment, in the absence of men comparable to the late Mr. Tilak, a militant and bitter supporter of Brahmin supremacy, head the wave of disaffection. Gandhi's position is a unique one. British official publications say that "even those who are most profoundly convinced that his political opinions are unsound, unpractical and even disastrous, can rarely be found openly to criticise, far less to oppose him." This opinion, however, now seems subject to revision; for while the rank and file of the Indian National Congress, now in session at Allahabad, has approved the Gandhist policy of non-co-operation and passive civil disobedience as a means of securing Swaraj or home rule, it is becoming increasingly evident that Gandhi's attempt to influence moderate Indian opinion is failing. Bipin Chandra Pal, a strong opponent of Lord Curzon's partition of Bengal, has come out openly in the Indian press to declare that hartals such as the Calcutta one on November 17 are purely the result of intimidation and that they do not in any way reflect real popular feeling. Govindaraghaon Iyer, a distinguished Brahmin of Madras, has appealed to Madras Liberals to support the government in the maintenance of peace and order. Bombay Liberals, under Sir Dinshaw Wacha and Mr. Samarth, have refused their support to Gandhi. Sir Bihod Mitter, in Bengal, has also come out in opposition to the extremists.

Allahabad, where the Indian National Congress is being held, is a stronghold of Gandhist influence. It is worth noting that, in the native states, where the reception of anti-British propaganda might be expected to be warmest, it is in reality coldest. Native rulers are under no misapprehensions as to the consequences of the "Back to Medievalism" movement.

The Indian National Congress must not be confused with the Indian Legislative Assembly. The former is a non-official body which for several years has passed anti-British resolutions. Sir Henry Verney Lovett, writing in the Asiatic Review, mentions that since 1916 this Congress has been dominated by extremists, and that it has looked largely to Sinn Fein, and in a lesser measure to the Zaghlulists in Egypt, for inspiration. The Indian Legislative Assembly is practically the Indian Parliament. Although its elections were boycotted by Gandhi, they nevertheless were carried out; and the Assembly is now functioning under the government of India act, which gives British India control over its own finances, agriculture, schools, roads and other features of internal administration, foreign policy and military matters being reserved to the Empire.

Observers here in London believe that Gandhi made his worst mistake in allying himself with the brothers, Mohammad Ali and Shaukat Ali, who had been conducting an intensive agitation among Indian Mohometans on behalf of Turkey. The alliance of Hindu and Moslem, these men say, is unnatural and artificial, never having been known in India before. This joining of forces certainly alienated many of Gandhi's Hindu followers.

"There can be little question," says an official report, "that had it been possible to satisfy public opinion in regard to the Punjab occurrences (the massacre and bombing of natives at Amritsar and elsewhere in 1919), the non-co-operation movement would have failed throughout the country at large."

There are, on the other hand, Indians, who do not believe that the non-co-operation movement has reached its zenith. A prominent Parsee writer warns that "the peace-loving people of India are gradually drifting into revolution and anarchy." To counteract this there is the fact that such ardent advocates of home rule as Mrs. Annie Besant have been shocked by the Moplah rebellion into a denunciation of at least the Mahometan wing of the non-co-operators.

About and beyond all these contributory causes, however, there remains the economic situation. The rupee is now worth 1s 4d, as against a normal 2s. Many Indians look with favor on non-co-operation, because they owe bills to manufacturers of the English midlands for goods bought when the rupee was worth 2s. 8d, its highest price.

It is a byword in the Indian office here that all Indian finance resolves itself into a gamble in rainfall. The present Indian situation apparently is a gamble in reconstruction.

Would Restrict Foreigners In China

(China Press Service)

Hankow, March 7.—The Chinese Chamber of Commerce at Chungking, an important commercial port in the upper Yangtze in the rich province of Szechuen, has proposed to the Associated Chambers of Commerce of China that protest should be lodged with diplomatic authorities at Peking against the establishment of foreign firms in inland cities not opened as treaty ports for foreign countries.

The Chungking Chamber believes that unless pressure is brought to bear to check the inroad now being made by foreign firms into purely Chinese trading centers, Chinese business is bound to be handicapped by their presence. It is now reported that the National Associated Chambers of China has filed a petition to this effect with the Ministry of Agriculture and Commerce and the Foreign Office at Peking.

An ambitious reconstruction plan for the port of Chungking is reported to be maturing under official auspices, and the initiative step of the scheme is to float a big loan with overseas Chinese to be devoted to modernizing that port. The plan embodies construction of modern city roads and other city improvements.

RICE SHOPS CLOSE

All the rice shops in Canton have closed according to a Hongkong telegram to the Shanghai Journal of Commerce because of the threat of the employees of the shops that they will burn the shops unless wage increases they have asked for are granted.

The employees assert, according to the message, that unless the owners answer immediately they will put the torch to the shops. General Chen, who mediated in the seamen's strike, has offered his services again as mediator.

Bonus Paper Not To Be Negotiable

(China Press Service)

Washington, March 10.—Comptroller of the Currency Crissinger has announced that if the bonus legislation is enacted providing payment by adjusted service certificates, he will advise the national banks to decline to accept the certificates as security on loans.

He said that the certificate would be non-negotiable paper. Loans on them would leave the banks for a three years term with an immovable mass of security.

Disarmament Bug Hits Sinkiang Tuchun

(Chung Mei Service)

Peking, March 8.—China is beginning to disarm in conformance with the wishes of the Washington Conference, according to news just reaching Peking. At least, a few thousand troops, superfluous in any case, are to be discharged, says a telegram from General Yang Chen-hsing, Tuchun of Singkiang, who has received an official notice from the Central Government urging less military expenses.

In the telegram General Yang argued that as the Chinese army is the largest in the world, it is the general wish of the Chinese people that a reduction should occur. Furthermore, he says at a time like the present, when the people are poor and the Central Government is facing an acute financial crisis the various Chinese military governors should realise the necessity of disarmament as a measure of retrenchment, even if the foreign powers had not advised it.

ABOUT COLDS

Why is it that one person catches cold on the slightest provocation while another can undergo all sorts of exposure and changes of temperature without contracting a chill?

The answer is to be found in the condition of the system. Thin blooded people take cold easily. They need a tonic to strengthen the body to resist disease.

A cold that hangs on for weeks and stubbornly resists ordinary remedies may prove the entering wedge for serious illness. Such a cold generally results in loss of weight, thinning of the blood and general weakness.

This condition emphatically calls for a tonic to build up the blood. Rich, red blood will tone up the entire system, strengthen the nerves and give health and vigour to the body.

Begin treatment at once with the nonalcoholic tonic which Mr. Walter Whitford, of No. 63 Paris Street, Everett, Mass., endorses. Its name is as well-known to you as to the people of America where this gentleman lives.

"I caught a severe cold last fall," says Mr. Whitford, "and it hung on from week to week until I began to despair of getting rid of it. I suffered a general break-down in health and was tired and languid. I lost my appetite and could not sleep well. There was a pain in my back and I felt sick all over.

"A friend recommended Dr. Williams' pink pills so I got some and began to take them. In a short time I began to regain my strength. My appetite improved in a few days and now I feel even better than I did before I had the cold. I strongly urge anyone in need of a tonic to try Dr. Williams' pink pills."

Dr. Williams' pink pills for pale people are sold by medicine dealers everywhere, also send post free, $1.50 per bottle, $8 for six bottles, by Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai. As good for women as for men.

Recognition Of Soviet Is World Need, Says Dr. Felix Deutsch

German Industrial Head Urges International Syndicate To Finance Russia As The Only Solution Of Problem

Dr. Felix Deutsch, privy councilor and president of the world known concern A. E. G. (German General Electric Company) has made the following statements:

"The Russian problem is one of the most important questions awaiting settlement. Three hundred million people living between Vladivostok and the Rhine are not now capable of resuming normal consumption. This must, in the long run, have a ruinous effect upon the whole world. Already mealies are burnt as fuel in South America; raw materials of all kinds are blocking warehouses, and harbors in the United States and Liverpool can neither house nor sell the wool crops of the last two seasons.

"The number of unemployed is now estimated at close to two millions in England and nearly seven millions in America. Gigantic sums are required for the assistance of these idle hosts. The last reason for this catastrophic unemployment is the inability of the teeming millions in Middle and Eastern Europe to resume normal consumption and in the complete collapse of the currencies of these countries.

"In Russia alone there is a peasant population of 150 millions who are not Bolshevists, but who would revolt against any government which would attempt to take away from them the land they today possess. They only produce a very small surplus over their own wants, which surplus they must cede to the Government. Their argument for this scanty production is that they can buy nothing with Soviet money. Experts affirm that if they could only obtain the most necessary wearing apparel, articles for daily use, agricultural machinery, etc., for any surplus they could produce, a great stimulus would be given to them to work and to produce in great style.

"Besides the peasants, there are in Russia roughly two million well-nourished soldiers and workmen. There is also a great multitude of intellectuals, principally officials of the Soviet Government, but devoid of all influence.

"I have long held that there is practically nobody in Russia who has any considerable interest—and much less the force or power—to upset the present Government. Nay, I am convinced that such an event would be a great misfortune for the world. For Russia would be thrown into a chaos which could not be cleared up in several decades.

"I have therefore, for nearly three years, held that there is only one course to pursue. It is imperative that negotiations with the Soviet Government be started forthwith and the attempt made to arrive at an understanding.

"Mr. Radek, who had been imprisoned in Berlin, was liberated in January, 1920. I had several meetings with this extraordinarily clever and highly educated man. Radek said such negotiations could be carried to a satisfactory result.

"A week after Radek had left here, Mr. Lloyd George stated in a speech that England was not in a position to acknowledge the Soviet Government, but that a reconstruction of Europe without Russia could not be carried through successfully. He therefore considered it necessary to resume immediately economic connections with Russia.

"A few weeks thereafter Lord Robert Cecil said that one might go a step farther and acknowledge the Soviet Government if this Government would refrain from Bolshevistic propaganda in England. Thereupon London started negotiations with Krassin and Kamenoff which led to a commercial agreement.

"I am convinced that the British Government, and especially Mr. Lloyd George, have judged the situation quite correctly and that this agreement will be of great utility to England.

"Russia is not a country but a gigantic continent which produces anywhere and everywhere everything one can imagine; but its produce is partly hidden away and eludes the grasp of the commercial world because its whole transport system is in a state of dissolution. Some time ago I asked a Russian friend from Moscow what would happen if I came with a million pairs of boots to Moscow, and promised a pair to every peasant who sold me ten sacks of grain. He promptly replied: 'Then you will get as much grain as you want.'

"Meantime the conditions of transport have somewhat improved. The permanent way has been put in order and that the 700 locomotives, which in the Spring are to be delivered from Germany to Russia will constitute a very material advance. The greatest difficulty lies in scarcity of fuel, but if Russia procures coal from England for its railways, there should be no great difficulty in putting railway transport in good order soon. The oil required is easily procurable by restarting boring in the huge Russian petrol territories.

"As regards the possibility of sales, the Russian peasant is much more alert and alive to practical considerations than formerly.

"The scarcity of practically every article for daily use in the country almost amounts to a famine and Russia's population of 150,000,000 peasants thus presents almost unlimited business possibilities for a long time to come.

"The question then arises as to what can be done for the reconstruction of Russia. Neither a single man nor a single country alone can solve this problem. The capitals immediately required are so big that only an international combination can hope to be able to dispose of them. Similarly, tranquility and security of working can only be guaranteed under the protection of powerful forces.

"A great international financial syndicate must be formed in which at any rate the United States of America, England, France and Germany must participate and which must have the support of the Governments of these countries. This syndicate must, without delay, start negotiations with the Soviet Government and complete them as soon as possible.

"It is clear that all plans and all work can only be undertaken with the full consent and cooperation of the Soviet Government, and that reconstruction of Russia must not be considered as simply the basis of a lucrative business. The attempt by every one to place everything at Russia's disposal at reasonable terms will make for speedy success and will assist the country soon to regain its strength.

"At first Russia will be unable to pay in cash, and arrangements will have to be made to give the syndicate certain rights and concessions as part payment during the initial stages. This should be sufficient for a few years, until agriculture has regained its full power as a consumer and a producer.

"Add to this that the old German colonists will return to Russia in large numbers, and that considerable new emigration to Russia from Germany, Austria and Hungary is likely, and it can be seen that the land will be much more intensively worked than in the past.

"As regards Russian industry, it will be desirable to resume as speedily as possible all the really necessary breaches. Locomotives, cars and agricultural machinery will have to be repaired and partly constructed anew; textile factories must be restarted and the sugar industry rebuilt; coal and iron also will absorb a great deal of attention."

Chang Agents In Hankow, Charge

(China Press Service)

Hankow, March 6.—Chang Tso-lin the Mukden satrap, now is injecting his influence into Hankow the most strategetical point of the impending conflict between two groups of militarists represented as south and north China. A batch of his agents and emissaries have crept into Hankow under the guise of merchants as a Chinese trading company. They have secured a block of thirteen houses in a certain foreign Concession in Hankow, where they operate apparently as a business firm, while in reality they concern themselves with nothing but politics.

These watchmen of Chang Tso-lin at Hankow are believed to be acting in sympathy and co-operation with Chang Hsun, the hard-boiled Tory of the defunct Manchu regime and for many years a latent force on the Yangtsze Valley situation, and also Tuan Chi-jui, both of whom were requested by Chang Tso-lin, it is reported, to send responsible men to consult with Chang's men at Hankow.

SHANTUNG WANTS HAND IN RUNNING OF OWN RAILWAY

Opposition Toward Peking Rapidly Developing

(Chung Mei News Agency)

Peking, March 8.—The Shantung people are maintaining a definite stand on the question of the director-generalship of the Shantung settlement to the effect that the powers of such an office should be strictly and definitely limited. Dr. C. T. Wang is reported to have declined to take the office to which he was appointed by presidential mandate and opposition to General Pien Chungyu as co-director is very strong. The Shantung gentry fear that the authority of the new office will encroach upon that of the director of the railway, and wish it to be specifically stated that the director-general of matters in connection with the Shantung settlement, is only authorised to deal with questions concerning the recovery of the rights in Shantung from the Japanese. The railway and its management, they declare, is an entirely separate question.

Opposition is also developing between Shantung and the Central Government concerning the policing of the railway. The Shantungese feel that the policing of the Kiaochou-Tsinan is a matter for them to handle but it is reported that General Tsai, the Shantung tuchun has suggested a compromise acceptable to the Shantung people and to the Peking Government. His plan is that the provincial authorities nominate the men to be entrusted with the duty of taking over the control from the Japanese, and that the Government then appoint them by mandate. The police to be drawn jointly from the forces in Peking and in Shantung and the number of men so used be decided by consultation between the Ministry of the Interior and the provincial yamen.

A further step in regard to the railway is the submission to the Government by Mr. Li Hai-kwan and others prominent among the Shantung gentry of a memorial requesting the publication of a statement showing the business condition of the line and the possibilities for its development; and finally urges efficient administration of the road in order to win the confidence of foreigners who have been declaring that the return of the railway to the Chinese would mean mismanagement.

The cabinet, according to information from Chinese sources, took up at its last meeting the question of the administration of the road and drew up a set of fifteen regulations regarding its ownership and the formation of a company to run it in the name of the people. The regulations will probably be published in the near future, but have not yet secured presidential approval.

Anglo Persian Oil Dividends Paid

(Reuter's Service)

London, March 10.—In the House of Commons today, Commander Hilton-Young, in moving a resolution, authorising the expenditure of £950,000 to pay the balance of 19 shillings per share on the million ordinary pound shares of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company, held by the Government, on which only a shilling per share had been paid, stated that despite the recent successful issue, the capital of the Company required to be substantially increased, in order to develop a more profitable undertaking, especially by constituting oil-tankers.

The existence of this uncalled for liability seriously hindered the Company from obtaining money, as the Government still retained full control of the Company. The resolution was agreed to by 192 votes to 21.

Capturer Of Lincoln's Slayer Is Now A Porter In Budapest

Broken Old Man Tells Of His Day Of Glory And Of Bad Luck And Disaster That Have Come Since

Vienna, February 12. — The broken old man who takes your things in the cloakroom of the Bristol Hotel in Budapest will stop you if he recognises you to be an American, and will tell you that he, too, was an American once. And if you greet him with more than a nod and a curt "So?" he will tell you the remarkable story of a Hungarian lad, who enlisted in the Union army, fought throughout the Civil War and played an important role in one of the memorable events of American history—the capture of Wilkes-Booth, the slayer of Lincoln.

That event is more than 50 years in the cloakroom porter's past and most of the 50 years have been spent in Hungary, and are full of excitement and tragedy. But to the porter in the Bristol, that afternoon so long ago, when he and a squad of American soldiers penetrated into a cabin in Maryland and found there the slayer of Lincoln, is the great memory of his life. He recounts the story tenderly, as one refers to an old romance, every detail so picturesque and vivid that, listening, one can see the capture and feel the excitement.

RAN AWAY TO WAR.

"My name is J. H. Birnbaum, but in the days when I was a soldier in the Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Company K. they called me by the English version of that name—Peartree. I was only a little boy when my parents emigrated to America. They prospered there. We had a fine house then, in old New York, at 8 Washington place, but it was torn down long ago. My father would have educated me well, but when I was 16 I ran away and joined the Union forces. That was in 1863.

"During the war our regiment was sent to defend the capital, and we were stationed in the Camp of Vienna, in Virginia, not far from Washington. The night that Lincoln was killed we were all called to the capital and our regiment was divided into scouting parties of various size, all under the command of Lieutenant Baker. The party to which I belonged had 35 men under Lieutenant Dougherty.

"Our party marched into Maryland the day after Lincoln was killed. The same night as we rode through the countryside we came upon a little forest. In the center was a clearing and a little farm, and there was a cabin with a light inside. We were tired and hungry, and the lieutenant said to me, 'Go and see whether that farmer will give you anything to eat.'

"Two or three others went with me. I remember it all so clearly. As we opened the door we saw a bearded old man, with a kindly, pious face, sitting and reading the Bible by candelight. When we asked the old farmer for food, he said there was nothing in the house but a jug of milk, and that he could not give us because he needed it for a sick man who was housed out in his barn and was under his care. I asked if we might see the invalid in order to help him, but the farmer answered that it was not necessary because the doctor was coming in the morning. I asked what was wrong with the patient, and the old man replied, 'He has a broken leg.'

"It must have flashed over my companions in that instant, as it flashed over me, that the man in the barn was Wilkes-Booth. We knew that Booth, in jumping from the box to the stage where he shot Lincoln, had injured his leg. I could see the faces of my comrades change. However, we said nothing, hurried away to report to the lieutenant.

"You will wonder why the farmer who was harboring the assassin told us so much. It was because he thought we were Confederate soldiers. In those days in Maryland nearly all the Confederates were wearing blue uniforms.

MISTAKEN PATRIOTISM

We reported to our lieutenant, and at midnight we surrounded the barn. We went quietly, for we wanted to capture Booth alive, without a fight. Bostom Corbett, one of our company, was standing by my side. He peered through a chink in the wall and saw that Booth had heard us and risen as well as he could, and that he had a carbine and was ready to fire. Simultaneously Corbett cocked his own rifle.

"Dougherty cried out, 'Don't fire,' but too late. Corbett fired, hitting Booth tehind the ear. We heard a low scream that was hardly more than a catch of the breath.

"He wasn't dead yet when we took him out—him and his accomplice Herold. Herold was all right and we bound him and laid him on the ground beside Booth. Booth's hair was in ribbons across his forehead and his eyes were glazed. Just before he died, though, they blazed up once. I stood at his feet, as close as I am to you, and as he died he called upon his mother, and he cried, 'I die for my country.'

"That is all. We carried him to a boat in the river nearby, and as we were putting the body on board the doctor who had been called to attend him came by, and so we arrested him also. Later I saw Herold hung. I do not like hangings," he concluded simply, "but I am proud that I helped bring to justice the men who murdered the greatest soul who ever lived. And I am proud that I was once a citizen of Lincoln's country."

REST OF THE STORY.

How came an American citizen from a prosperous family to be serving out his years across the world as the porter of a Hungarian hotel? Here is the rest of the story.

"I came abroad in 1867. The war had told on me. I was not strong, and when I was demobilised I was quite ill. I went to take a job in New Orleans, and there I got yellow fever, and doctors ordered me to come abroad. So I did. I had no intention of coming back to Hungary, and many times since then —" his voice lowered a little—"I wish I hadn't. I was in England and France and Germany, and then I took it into my head that I would like to come back and see the city where I was born. Ah, Budapest in those days was a wicked city. It was full of exotic temptations to a young man with plenty of money and a taste for adventure. I stayed on—one month, two months, three months. And then suddenly I was conscripted into the Hungarian Army and ordered to join the army of occupation in Bosnia.

"Sometimes, I suppose, you get irritated with all the visas and documents you have to carry with you these days, but in those days there weren't any passports, and that fact caused me a greater inconvenience than you have ever suffered in all your life. I had no way to prove I was an American citizen. I was registered in the birth registry in Budapest. All I had with me was my discharge certificate from the army. There was then no American Consul in Budapest, and though Mr. Causer, who had an agency here, telegraphed about me to the Ambassador in Vienna, he seemed unable to do anything. They sent me to Bosnia. For 12 years I served in the Hungarian Army.

BAD LUCK EVER SINCE

"Well, I married. I made my home here. I had children. I even enjoyed a certain prestige because I had been in the United States and could speak perfect English. Now it seems that every other person in Budapest speaks English, but it was not so in the 80s. The great professor, Armenius Vambery, the world's greatest orientalist, who was knighted by King Edward of England for his services to Britain in the East, who was the greatest linguist, perhaps, in the world, used to invite me to come and see him, to talk English with him. I was a member of a very exclusive colony.

"But bad luck has followed me always. I had three sons. I brought them up to love America, and the picture which they have of me in a Union uniform is the most treasured possession of our household. But they had to fight against the Allies in the war, and one of them was killed, one went insane and one had both arms and legs shot away.

"So now, in my old age, I must support my crippled son and my poor sick son, who are all I have left—for my wife died—like that—when she heard that our other boy was killed. And times are hard now—and I am old."

The guests from lunch were crowding the cloakroom, and anyhow, the old man had finished his story.

Handbags Must Match The Gloves

Paris, Jan. 14.—Handbags must match the gloves according to the latest idea in fashion.

For several weeks fashionable women have been using the same colored materials in their purses as in their dresses, but now gloves striped with purple, blue, green and white kid have appeared and bags are being made to blend with these colors.

-:- Heroine -:-

HERE you see Mrs. Norman Gurling and Dorothy Grace Gurling, of White Plains, N. Y. If you read newspapers you know about Mrs. Gurling. She is the heroic mother who, just a few days before Dorothy Grace was born, climbed twenty feet down a well to rescue her fifteen-months-old son, Norman. The water in the well was twenty feet deep. Mrs. Gurling had to dig holes in the sides of the well to hold her feet, as she descended and ascended. She brought the boy up on her shoulders unharmed. She, too, was uninjured. Because she's such a wonderfully good and brave mother Dame Nature sent the stork around with Dorothy Grace probably as a reward, and you may see for yourselves how happy Mrs. Gurling is now.

Have A Spelling Of Your Own

BY RING W. LARDNER

To the editor:

I see by the papers where they are putting on a old fashion spell down in Detroit and giveing away prizes to the kids that can spell the best and etc. and a event like this kind always stirs up a lot of int. in a town and is a good thing for a town though it does seem kind of funny to hold a spelling contest in a place where they put a z in Cousins.

But any way they's no subject which I am more interested in it than the subject of spelling and this may come as a supprise to some of my readers as the impression seems to of got around that I am not a A. No. I speller though nothing could be further than the truth. They may be a good many wds. which I don't spell them the same way like they are spelled in the dictionary but that is no sign that my way ain't just as good and maybe a little better and I always say that if people can understand easy what a man means, why that means he is a good speller and I will bet you can't find no wds. in any of my writeings that is ½ as hard to understand as wds. you will find in the dictionary.

In fact dictionary way of spelling wds. is so hard that after every wd. they half to write down some other wd. that means the same thing so as people can tell what the 1st wd. meant.

Speaking about the dictionary it has got a couple of chapters in it which you can read without going to sleep and one of them tells where several different men of learning has tried to fix up our language so as every letter would have only one sound and as soon as you seen a wd. spelled out you would know the right way to pronounce it, and one of these men said the only way that could be done would be by adding 14 more letters to the alphabet. This idear was throwed in the ash can on motion of the people that makes alphabet soup.

In another chapter it tells where a man named Ellis was trying experiments with the letters we have all ready got and he found out that you can spell the wd. scissors 6,000 different ways. It didn't tell what he done with himself the rest of the morning. And it didn't why we half to go on spelling it scissors when sizzers would cut your nails just as pretty.

H. L. Mencken has wrote a book on the American Language, which he brings out in it how different we spell than the English though we are supposed to both be useing the same tongue.

Well, they will be more and more differents as the yrs. go by, so what I say is that it don't do no harm for me to spell a wd. different from the way some old English dictionary writer spelled is, provided I make the spelling easier, which is what Americans generally always do. Like for inst. an Englishman would say:

"I have the honour to enclose a cheque."

Whereas we would say:

"I have the honor to enclose a check," which is two less letters which don't amt. to much in one sentence but would be a big saving in a long book. Wells's history book for example, and if he could of wrote it in at least a ½ hr. less time.

Wile we are on the subject of spelling, though I don't want to discourage none of the Detroit boys and gals that's trying to improve themselfs along those lines, yet it seems nessary to say at this pt. that spelling is something which you can't master no more than singing alto. Either you are a born good speller or born bum speller and if you are a good speller you won't half to spend no time in school studying how to spell this wd. or that.

On the other hand if you are a rotten speller you will keep on being a rotten speller though if you have got a good memory you can get high marks.

Like for inst., I know a gal that when she was in school she always got a 100 in spelling because she studied all the wds. that was in the book and memorised how to spell them. But for the 1st. 2 yrs. after we was married we lived on Prairie Ave. in Chicago and every time she wanted to write and tell one of her friends her address, she would half to go out first and look at the street sign. But a woman don't half to be a good speller to be a good wife and in fact some of the best wifes I know has their bad spells.

But they's another wd. of cheer which I might breath to folks that has trouble with their spelling and that is that some of the most famous people in history was rotten spellers and men like Shakespeare and Chaucer and etc. was so bad that if you read their stuff you will sometimes find the same wd. spelled 4 and 5 different ways on the same page. Geo. Washington, Babe Ruth and John L. Sullivan is others who might be mentioned as guys that clumb to the pinnacle but if you asked any of them to spell pinnacle they would probably bust you in the jaw.

As for good spelling being nessary for financial success it would almost seem like the facts of the case was just opp. The richest people in the world is the boys that draws that comical cartoons. These guys makes more money than a boot legger, but when they get their cartoons all drawed they half to send out for a copy of yesterday's paper before they can sign their name.

If those ain't enough alibis to tell teacher, why you might mention that nobody but a nut could spell our language right—that is according to the dictionary—with all the paradoxes and inconsistents and etc. which we have got in it. We may think the Russians and frogs has got a hard lingo to master, but suppose you was a foreigner going to school in this country and you thought you was getting wise to the system of spelling when all of a sudden you would run across 5 wds. like lough, bough, dough, rough and cough. There is 5 wds. spelled the same way only for the 1st letter. Try and make them rhyme.

Philippines Also Suffering From Lack Of Money

(China Press Service)

Manila, March 9.—The Philippine Government's general fund is pitifully low. Teachers salaries are unpaid since January owing to Pesos 64,000,000 being tied up in banks on loans which will take time to liquidate. All public works practically are at a standstill including irrigation schemes and the Manila port works so urgently needed.

With the treasury practically gutted save for the frozen deposits above mentioned, the Legislature has rejected the new assessments and voted to return to the 1920 rates which will mean a loss to the government of 30 percent of the land tax, unless Governor General Wood vetoes the bill.

Unless Wood gets quick Congressional action on the proposed issue of bonds, the closing of the public schools seems inevitable, and this would be accompanied by a practical paralysis of fundamental activities such as roads, bridges and port works.

The situation is the most critical in recent years and is without prospect of a sufficient commercial and agricultural revival to rehabilitate the banks and thus rapidly make available the government funds deposited there. Customs and internal revenue receipts have fallen off lately fifty percent which is due in part to the Hongkong strike, but more largely to the business depression caused by low prices for Philippine agricultural staples such as hemp, copra, sugar and tobacco.

Exchange rates again are mounting against the peso but owing to curtailed imports due to the hard times, it is now expected that the discount will run to more than ten percent.

American Club Women Visit Art Collection

Members and guests of the American Woman's Club extended their acquaintance with China's birds through a lecture given by a keen observer and a kindly interpreter, Mr. Andrew Allison of Kiangyin, before the general meeting of the club, Tuesday afternoon. In Mrs. Raven's absence Mrs. H. P. Sailor presided, the program for the day being in the hands of the Mothers' Department.

During the tea hour it was announced that the Fair originally suggested for April would be postponed till fall in order to give more time to develop representative exhibits from all sections of the States. At the business meeting the Rev. A. R. Kepler urged the club members to open their homes to the delegates to the National Christian Conference to be held May 2-11 and Mrs. F. J. Sites and Mrs. A. P. Parker were appointed a committee to secure as wide hospitality as possible. Mrs. W. G. Hiltner announced that the Mothers' Department was planning an Easter Saturday Egg Rolling for members' children up to ten years and that it was hoped to hold the same in Jessfield Park April 15, further plans to be announced later.

VISIT ART COLLECTION

A number of ladies from the Literary Department of the American Woman's Club visited the art collection of Dr. Stafford Cox on Wednesday afternoon. Besides the art treasures which Dr. Cox had exhibited to part of the department on an earlier visit, he displayed at this time additional items of his collection which they had not been unpacked after his return from war service in France.

Among the exquisite objects not hitherto seen was a large five color vase—a gorgeous vase of the Sang de Boeuf, about seven inches in height—and two incomparable peachblow porcelain boxes about three inches in circumference, intended for the scholar's desk. With their wonderful old rose and green coloring they are appropriate additions to Dr. Cox's unexcelled collection of peachblow. As if to watch over these priceless objects, three fearsome "guardians of the tombs" are included in the collection, all about two feet in height, two standing with one foot on the head of an animal.

As for the paintings shown, they were nearly all new to the group, none of them having been included among those shown at Professor Siren's lecture at the Country Club, and only two having been shown at the previous visit to this collection. Two pictures, large ink paintings by Ma Yuan, one of the four greatest artists of the Sung Dynasty were shown, one of them showing the characteristic crooked pine trees so dear to the Chinese artist, and both giving that sense of distance and the great sense of infinity which Professor Siren emphasised as marking Oriental art.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT

"Modern Composers" was the subject presented at the meeting of the Music Department on Thursday in the rooms of Mrs. Bardarson at the Astor House Miss M. S. Mitchell of St. Mary's Hall gave the paper, which was expressively illustrated by local musicians. Officers for the next year were elected at the preceding business meeting as follows: chairman, Mrs. W. R. Chapman; vice-chairman, Mrs. M. P. Walker; second vice-chairman, Mrs. M. C. Guss; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Bardarson; committee: Mrs. Joel Black, Mrs. R. T. Bryan, Jr., Mrs. Lavers, Mrs. Bode, Mrs. Kurt, Mrs. A. H. Hallam, Mrs. John Davies, Mrs. H. A. Wilbur, Mrs. F. Rawlinson, Mrs. L. C. McLachlin, Mrs. R. Vanderburgh, and the Misses Taylor, Austin, Fitch and Perkins.

On Wednesday morning, March 15, at the Mothers' Department meeting at the Carlton Cafe at ten o'clock, Mr. George B. Fryer, Superintendent of the Institution for the Chinese Blind, and also of the Industrial School for Chinese, will speak on "Vocational Training." Mr. Fryer is an expert on this important subject and an excellent speaker so the lecture should be of more than usual interest. All desiring to hear Mr. Fryer are cordially invited to be present.

A story of slips on the peal of Wedding Bells

And he wasn't even thankful when his married life lasted only two days.

Then bobbed hair and measles got a divorce—at least just a temporary divorce; because when he went to marry another girl—!-!-X-*-X-?

PEKING-TIENTSIN WIRELESS 'PHONE SERVICE LARGEST

Utility Made Available For Private Users

(China Mei Service)

Peking, March 8.—The largest wireless telephone service in the world was today successfully opened between Tientsin and Peking. The progress of this invention of recent years has been successfully carried on by wireless for longer distances than the Peking-Tientsin line but it is a new record for a toll line. The most notable commercial record elsewhere is the service between Catalina Island and the Pacific coast, a distance of thirty miles. The Peking-Tientsin line permits telephone users in the two cities to talk to each other by wireless without leaving their homes or offices and is unique in the world today. It constitutes a great engineering achievement.

The equipment was supplied by China Electric Company, Limited, and is destined for the Ministry of Communications. At the times given today at Peking and Tientsin by the suppliers of the equipment, officials of the Ministry of Communications and representatives of the Press were able to listen in on a wireless telephone conversation over the new line between Director General Tsiang, of the Telephone and Telegraph Department of the Ministry, and the Manager of the Government Telephone Exchange at Tientsin.

This first conversation over the new line convinced all present that wireless telephone communication over long distances is not only possible, but that wherever wire lines cannot be built, or for any reason are out of service, this new wireless system will be of the greatest assistance. In China, where very few interurban lines have been built, this long distance wireless system will meet a long felt need.

The equipment is the result of many years of development work by the telephone engineers of America who made possible a successful telephone conversation between Washington and Paris as far back as 1915.

Efforts of engineers have since been directed toward development of a complete system which will function in all respects as a long distance wire line. That their efforts have been crowned with success was successfully demonstrated today.

The system uses improved Audion tubes so perfected as to insure commercial transmission when connected to telephone central offices. The problem of simultaneous radio reception and transmission, the connection of wireless installations to telephone central offices, devices enabling a telephone operator to call a distant operator in such a way as to avoid the necessity for the latter to be continually listening for signals are among the numerous problems which the engineers have had to solve.

The charge for telephoning from Peking to Tientsin with and without using wires will be the same. In general the cost of establishing wireless service is slightly in excess of the old fashioned wire methods. It is not the function of wireless telephones to replace wire systems already in use.

They are however of great utility where no wires exist and where it is desired to have a service without delay or where there are serious obstacles to the stretching of the wire. As has been mentioned wireless telephones are particularly applicable to China and can be used over the great stretches of country where there are no telephones today. Wireless telephones require no maintenance of line and cannot be cut by bandits. It is believed that the Peking-Tientsin line will be moved to another part of China where there are no telephones already in use.

Share Market

Messrs. J. P. Bisset and Company write as follows in their share report for week ending Friday:

Business has continued dull on the local Share market during the past week with little more than a moderate demand for the good Investment Stocks doing. A lack of confidence in cottons is noticeable as a result of the poor final dividend declared by the Oriental C. S. & W. Co., Ltd., and quotations for all cottons have since fallen in sympathy, more especially in Orientals, which have slumped to Tls. 10.

Will Science Upset the World With Artificial Gold?

Under Government Subsidy German Chemists Are Straining to Make the Precious Metal—and If They Do They Will Turn Civilization Topsy-Turvy

This Is How a Famous Cartoonist of the Middle Ages Depicted an Alchemist at Work Trying to Transmute Lead Into Gold, Surrounded by Familiar Spirits, Devils and Witches. From an Old Engraving by Jerome Cock.

THE cabled announcement that German scientists are at last on the track of a formula to produce synthetic gold, has created a world-wide sensation.

One dispatch even goes so far as to say that there is a gram of artificial gold already in existence, and that the secret process is being jealously guarded while further experiments are being prosecuted under the patronage of the German Government itself.

"Well, and what of it?" you may say to yourself after reading thus far. "Let the chemists and scientists rave. It doesn't interest me."

Such a discovery would be, indeed, revolutionary in purely scientific circles—but it would be even more revolutionary in the world of business and finance—and in the ordinary workaday world in which most of us live.

In fact, it would set the whole world topsy-turvy, and probably bring about what the great war failed to do—a complete change and readjustment of modern civilization.

Germany's pressing reason for interesting herself in this age-old problem is not far to seek. Her war and reparation debts have been fixed by the Allies in terms of gold—or its equivalent—and Germany owes three times as much gold as there is in all the mints and treasuries and bank vaults of the entire world to-day.

She is like a poker player whose loss is equal to three times all the chips in the game, and in the normal process she would have to win all the chips three times in succession to "pay out."

Her present scheme, to follow out the gambling analogy, is to manufacture the chips which she owes.

Now, suppose a man in a poker game actually did this? Suppose he manufactured a lot of chips which were exactly like those in the game, but which had not been paid for at the "bank"; and suppose he succeeded in introducing them into the game?

What would happen when the time came to "settle up"?

Not only would his "manufactured" chips be worth only twenty-five cents on the dollar, but all the other chips in the game would be equally reduced in value.

And if the other players imitated the trick and dumped a lot of "manufactured" chips into the game—all the chips would, eventually, become absolutely worthless.

One British scientist says:

"That is exactly what may happen in the greater world-wide 'game' of banking and finance and business if Germany has discovered and can apply a practical and inexpensive method of manufacturing artificial gold.

"The more gold Germany manufactures, the lower will fall the value of all gold, until, if the process is carried far enough, gold will become of no more value than iron or lead.

"And as the monetary and trading systems of practically all countries are based on the 'gold standard,' the entire financial fabric of the world may be ripped to pieces."

Statisticians say that there's only about eight and one-half billions of dollars' worth of gold coin and bullion in the entire world, and on that foundation is pyramided a world-wide currency and credit system of more than 525 billions.

If the gold standard were destroyed, not only would the foundation be wrecked, but the whole superstructure would come tumbling down.

That is why Professor Irving Fisher, of Yale University, one of America's leading economic and financial experts, has hurriedly sailed for Germany to investigate these remarkable reports at first hand.

Have you ever asked yourself why gold—rather than any other metal or substance—is so universally prized—why it has been, in all countries and all ages, the standard of wealth and the synonym for riches?

Such things do not occur by accident, and the fact that gold is rare—and consequently valuable—is not alone a sufficient explanation. There are other metals, other elements, just are rare and valuable, many of them even more valuable.

Here are some of the additional reasons why gold is so highly prized by mankind:

Gold is a beautiful color, bright yellow—the color of light and the color of the sun, which humanity for thousands of generations worshipped as a god. It has lustre as well as color. It resists oxidation—does not tarnish or turn black. It is comparatively soft, and consequently lends itself easily to the work of the artist, who uses it in making jewelry, ornaments and other objects of luxury and beauty. It is easily coined into money, and because of its weight, texture and elemental nature is one of the most difficult metals to counterfeit successfully.

Gold has probably caused more happiness and more misery, more wars, more admirable industry, more terrible crime, more conquests, voyages and epics than any other material substance in the universe.

It has stood as the symbol for everything that is good and everything that is evil in the human heart. As the golden calf which the Hebrews worshipped in the early chapters of the Bible, it stands for the Mammon of Unrighteousness, and in the latter church symbology based on the Book of Revelations, Heaven itself has streets paved with gold, the symbol of brightness and joy.

Literature is full of it—the classic story of Jason and the Golden Fleece, the Golden Apples of the Hesperides, the story of how Jupiter transformed himself into a shower of gold to win a mortal woman—the Danae.

It was gold—the hope of gold from India—that sent Columbus across a trackless ocean to discover a new world, and it was the gold of Ferdinand and Isabella that made possible the undertaking.

And it is this bright, yellow gold, this strange metal which has been so interlocked with tragedies and the progress of of the world alike, that German chemists, backed by their Government, are secretly trying to manufacture in their laboratories.

Such experiments are older than chemistry itself. They began with the alchemists in the early Middle Ages—when science and black magic were akin.

Hermes Trismegistus, Nostradamus, Cagliostro—half the magicians and necromancers of early Europe—tried with the combined aid of science and the devil, to wrest from nature the secret of the imaginary "philosopher's stone," which was to transmute lead and the baser metals into gold.

Some of these went to terrible lengths in their magical experiments. Dumas the Elder tells of how Joseph Balsamo, locked in the depths of his mediaeval laboratory and following advice which he believed came from the spirit world, murdered a beautiful maiden and poured her blood into a mixture of molten metal. Michelet, in his chronicles of early France, tells of even more horrible crimes, and suggests that Gilles de Retz, the monster who was the original of the "Bluebeard" in the fairy tale, and who actually murdered scores of girls and little children, may have been one of these alchemist-magicians.

Until the announcement was made to the world recently that Germany was trying to succeed with real chemistry and science where alchemy and black magic had failed, there was no record that any modern scientist had ever seriously undertaken to make synthetic gold, or believed that such an operation was possible.

Since the announcement was made leading chemists and scientists of nearly every country outside Germany have declared their belief that the thing was absolutely impossible, but the scientific correspondent of the London Times, himself a man of considerable scientific prestige, is not so sure that it is "impossible."

"It is dangerous," he says in a recent issue of the British newspaper, "to deny the possibility of any achievement of science, though I do not know of any existing knowledge which suggests that a chemist can transmute the baser metals into gold."

This expert suggests that if the German synthetic chemists actually have discovered a formula for making gold, it must be based on the new theory of interatomic energy, and says that "the accomplishment of such a transmutation by means of breaking up matter into atoms mean a 'revaluation of all values' infinitely greater than the profound change it would bring in the standard of money. For it would mean the discovery of a new source of energy far surpassing anything that has ever been available to the world.

"If we can tap sub-atomic energy, then everything, from coal and oil to human labor, will assume a new aspect. The world will have to shape a civilization so profoundly different from that which exists now that we shall have more to do than to worry over the German escape from the penalties of foiled ambition. If a pound of clay or chalk becomes as useful as a great coal field or an oil pocket, we shall no longer be concerned with the relative values of printed paper and coined money."

Fashion's Day Complete by Lady Duff-Gordon

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, presenting all that is newest and best in styles for well-dressed women.

Lady Duff-Gordon's Paris establishment brings her into close touch with that centre of fashion.

By LADY DUFF GORDON.

("Lucile")

IN the game of romance, few women fail to recognize the significance of clothes. For what day could be quite complete in the real life romantic drama unless the leading lady be correctly attired in the apparel fashion prescribes for each occasion?

Morning, afternoon and evening are the three-time divisions in fashion's day. And for each of those few precious hours of romance, I have selected an appropriate robe.

For morning, at breakfast, when perhaps theexpected "billet doux" arrives to begin the day well, I have designed the lounging robe of delicate chiffon with its crystal motif at front and trailing streamers of self material that fall into side trains.

The afternoon hour of tea time claims another frock from fashion's wardrobe. The ribbon-trimmed model of velvet and georgette is chic and graceful for this occasion. Over the georgette foundation there is a circular tunic fashioned of the soft crepe. It's circular edge is outlined with infinite rows of moire ribbon, with an occasional shot of metal thread to light the shadows.

Panne velvet fashions the top tunic, falling over the sheer foundation from its low "V" neck line at front and back. Sleeve ends fall into harmony with the sheer tunic, by their duplicate ribbon outlines; I have chosen the small turban of velvet to wear with this afternoon gown, and trimmed its high brim with a bandeau of glycerined ostrich in keeping with the fussy frock with which it is worn.

When Milady prepares for the affair of evening, she selects two garments from fashion's wardrobe. The evening gown of metal brocaded net seems built to accompany the velvet evening wrap that is thrown about the shoulders before entering the motor.

Corsetless Figure Now Rules Among Those Who Follow Fashion Changes

No one should minimise the importance of the change in women's figures brought about by the corset which is not a corset. What happened two decades ago is happening now, and the public regards the change with the same scepticism it accorded them. Today the so-called corsetless figure rules among those who follow new movements in fashion. Two decades ago it was the low, straight front corset which caused the revolution in women's figures.

At that time the public insisted that the change was temporary and would not be accepted by sufficient women to guarantee its approval, yet, today, this very straight front corset is supposed to be the standard, and modest, fashion for women.

That was an important revolution in women's figures in those days.

Women who like the small waist and the curving hips protested wildly at effecting these alleged attributes of loveliness. Men admired their wasp waist and gentle curves. There are men living who refer to the fine figures of those days as they do to old port and good manners. Clothes had bones and tight waist belts. No one thought it vulgar or grotesque to curve out fully and freely below the waist.

But these ladies who liked their figures found the stream of fashion against them. Yet what woman would return to this type of corset? Those who rebelled against the new corset are dead or they have drifted with the tide.

The suppresion of hips, the flattening of the bust, the broadening of the waist continued until it became the standardised figure and the corsets of the world were modeled to support it.

What has been, will be. The revolution is here. It may be that the public will not accept it, but there is every evidence that it will.

The features of the revolution are these: The waist line is left to its natural proportions. The abdomen is not entirely suppressed. The bust is held in by a brassiere which does not extend over the diaphragm. The lower part of the hips may not be suppressed, but when they are, tricot or rubber is used. The middle bone of the corset does not hold the fasteners, except in isolated cases.

Dominating all the other features is this: The corset goes down in the back and up in the front. To insure this movement the elastics are often omitted from the front and placed dircetly in the back.

WHAT TO WEAR BENEATH

These things are not new to the corset maker. They are new to the majority of women. The same uproar is going on against this state of affairs that created the low, straight front corset in other days.

When the corset makers advanced these new corsets over a year ago they were greeted with amusement by the dressmakers and the trade did not lend enthusiastic support. The young and the supple women accepted them as a substitute for an undershirt and a pair of bloomers, which is the maximum amount of underwear endorsed by the debutante.

In Paris they were accepted without protest except in the working classes, where they are still considered indecent. In America they have gained widespread popularity and are sold even by conservatve people who refused to have anything to do with them last winter.

Of course, they change the figure. Of course, they change the arrangement of one's clothes.

No woman can wear a skirt with a tight waist belt over such corsets. It is not comfortable. With her tailored skirts she usually wears the pinafore top, which is like a girdle bodice with shoulder straps. The French designers used this form of lining for all their frocks, no matter what the fabric. The American was offered this idea two years ago, but refused it.

Bloomers do not go as well over this corset as they went over the other kind, so the French designers offer to the American public the type of garment which all of them wear—a one piece slip hanging from the shoulders by straps.

It serves as a substitute for bloomers and petticoat. It is made in all colors of crepe, satin and georgette.

There is another garment worn under the corset as a substitute for the undershirt by those who like to feel themselves more fully dressed than ultrafashion suggests. This is the short slip of crepe de chine or georgette crepe which is like a slim undershirt, ending in a pair of bloomers held in by elastic at the knees.

MECHANISM OF THESE CORSETS

No woman should be misled into believing that she can go into a shop and order one of these corsets without thought.

There is no type for all figures. There is as much variety in these corsets as in the kind we have worn for decades. The makers are tumbling over each other with remedies, inventions, devices for comfort, adaptations for those who have not the "perfect figure that save money," as Rose Stahl once said in "The Chorus Lady."

To offset the evil middle bone which digs into the waist a designer has put out corsets that button on each side. Many flexible bones are placed across the front panel so that it will not be entirely useless.

Sometimes this type has lacing at the back, not always. Women prefer the absence of laces for the reason that new skirts are pulled tightly across the end of the spine and the lacing makes a ridge under the fabric of the frock.

There are types that have no fastening and no lacing. You step in them and pull them up after the fashion of a nineteenth century squire pulling on his long boots. There are no straps that help you!

For women with too much flesh on the hips wide elastic bands are added on the inside of these corsets to act as garters below the hips and keep them from rising up as one walks.

VARIATIONS OF ONE MODEL

There are corsets of pique combined with elastic which button on each side and have strong garters down the middle of back. Others are of satin and tricot with a short bone in front and a long back which extends over the hips.

The importance of choosing different corsets for different costumes is apparent. The corset makers have harkened to the criticisms of the public and fashioned types to suit tailored clothes, also fleshy women. Certain of them are cut higher in the back than the afternoon and evening corset. A long waisted brassiere that fastens to the top button of the corset goes along with them.

The striking novelty of the season is a black velvet corset made for dancing. It is topless and has six elastics loosely fastened to the stockings, as every woman knows she cannot dance with tight garters.

There is a black lace brassiere to go with this corset which is hung over the shoulders with fine platinum chains.

There are afternon corsets which go up higher in front than back in order to give the new silhouette which calls for a lowered waist line in the back.

PULL DOWN CORSET AT BACK

Flustered and bewildered women are trying to learn the new method. Patient and expostulating saleslades are trying to point out the new path.

"You don't mean I have to pull it down in the back and let it ride up in the front," wildly cries a woman who has spent much of her life pulling the flesh above them. She could cry when the corset fitter gets through with her.

"But I have always had such a good figure," she wails. "None of my clothes will fit over this corset. I feel as though I were falling backward."

The corset fitter agrees with her, but does not console her.

You cannot wear the new gowns if you do not put your corsets on in the new manner. Surely you do not want to go about with a whalebone sticking through the middle of your frock, over your diaphragm!"

"But I look so fat in this corset," says the woman. She is on the point of tears. Her life is falling like building blocks about her.

"On the contrary, you look much smaller," explains the saleslady. "All that flesh is gone from your diaphragm. It no longer makes a ridge over your shoulder blades. It is pushed up under your arms. You are in proportion now."

"But I don't like it; I don't like it," pleads the woman. "Will I really be unfashionable if I wear my old corsets?"

The flapper looks them over and says to the saleslady: "You don't think I'd wear one of those boned things, do you? Give me a plain tricot band with a pair of garters at the back and a row of buttons at the side. How could I dance with one of those things that have bones at the front and come above the waist?"

And the saleslady, ever ready to meet varying opinions, says: "But these are newer than the bands. Corsets have really come back into fashion. The lack of them has caused women to spread. Here's one of velvet with just a few bones across the front and short laces at the back. Do try it. The entirely uncorseted figure is out."

Decide between the two, you who buy corsets.

TROUBLE WITH MIDDLE BONE

All brains seem to be set in the same direction to eliminate the ugliness of the broad steel in the front of the corset. Rising above the waist line, as it does in the old-fashioned type, it protrudes in the front of the frock. When the fabric is thin, the effect is all it should not be.

One of the remedies is to place five small bones in the front and use lacing or buttons instead of hooks and eyes.

Another source of worry is the lacing at the back which many women demand to keep the corset from spreading, but which all admit produces an ugly line across the end of the spine.

If it were fashionable to wear gathers or plaits in the skirts, at the middle of the back, the lacing would be obliterated. The opposite fashion is in power. Exaggerated fullness is placed at each side of the skirt, sometimes in front, but the back of the skirt must be drawn tightly across the figure. Such manipulation of the fabric exposes every bulge or ridge beneath.

If you talk to women about these corsets—and if any other subject can get ahead of this, I'd like to know it—the fault of the ugliness of the middle bone will be laid to the brassiere.

"Some of us must wear heavy bones in front," say the talkers, "and we must have the corset rise a bit above the waist, but the brassiere people do not think of anyone but a flapper who goes without corsets." Alas and alack, too true, too true.

There is one answer to the appeal of these women. It rests in a surplice brassiere, built of coarse lace that crosses around the waist line and ties or hooks in the back. This has to be fastened to the top of the corset by safety pins to make it stay down and its two lace streamers going about the waist give unsightly thickness.

France has produced a new long brassiere in answer to this demand. It is like a corset cover, cut on slim lines, and it buttons to the middle front of the corset.

How to Develop the Hidden Beauty of the Hair

Perfect beauty is given to few women, but, with a little intelligence, all could make the best of whatever good looks they possess. Nothing makes more difference to a woman's appearance than the condition of her hair; it greatly enhances the charm of the pretty woman, if it is glossy and well-groomed, and beautiful hair atones for plainness in the less fortunate.

A great deal depends on the shampoo used. The hair, to look its best, must be frequently cleansed. Many shampoos, which do not lather well, only partially cleanse the hair; consequently it never appears as bright and glossy as it should. Many society women and actresses who know the value of beauty and the importance of preserving it, are now forsaking hairdressing establishments, and having their hair washed at home by their maids. For this purpose a shampoo is made with stallax granules and hot water. This substance produces a sweet scented foaming lather which thoroughly cleanses the hair. After rinsing the hair is quickly dried with hot towels, and the results are most satisfactory.

All the hidden sheen of the hair is brought out, and it is beautifully soft, wavy, and easy to do up.

All shampoos have a tendency to dry the hair. In cases where the scalp is naturally very oily, the use of stallax acts as an excellent corrective. For those whose hair is inclined to be dry and brittle, massaging the scalp with olive oil before each shampoo, is recommended.

Brushes should be kept thoroughly clean. A little ammonia in the water used for washing them, ensures this. They should be finally rinsed in cold water, so as to stiffen the bristles.

First Horseless Race

Story of 1895 Test, Exceeding Ten Hours for Fifty-Four Miles, Reads Like a Romance

America's first horseless carriage race was run in Chicago on Nov. 28, 1895. The development of the motor car that has gone on apace since then could be illustrated no better than by a brief comparison of the results achieved in that historic contest and in the races of recent years. The first automobile race in the United States was inspired by a purse offered by H. H. Kohlsaat, publisher of The Chicago Times-Herald. A narrative of the hair-raising incidents of the classic has been preserved in a series of articles appearing in the Motorcycle, a monthly magazine published in Chicago.

The first motor car race in America was held in the wake of one of those great snowstorms which nearly obliterate the Windy City. The contestants frequently found their cars stuck hopelessly in snow drifts. Before they could continue the grind they had to jump out and give their old fashioned machines a shove, and often to get them going they had to keep sanding the belts and replacing the chains that were used for the propulsion of the buggies with light motors. All day long they plowed through the slush in order to cover a distance of fifty-four miles on a circuit that carried them along the lake shore to Evanston and back to the heart of the city. They completed the trip after dark, and the winner's elapsed time was ten hours and twenty-three minutes. His average speed was five and one-quarter miles an hour.

Compare with this speed the average of ninety-five to ninety-six miles made last year at Daytona, Fla., for 100 miles. And where the best time made by the old motor cars in the first race was little more than seven and one-half miles an hour, approximately 153 miles an hour was made by Tommy Milton on the Daytona track in April, 1920.

But the races at Daytona were hardly more spectacular than the first automobile contest in Chicago. For the motor cars were paced by horse-drawn sleighs with the official observers and trailed by a nondescript crowd including school girls who appeared in their bloomers, players who left a football game, and all kinds of unofficial observers. There were collisions between motor cars in the race and the sleighs of the observers, as well as collisions with trolley cars and other conveyances. The casualties were numerous, but they were very slight and not a fatality was recorded.

Eleven competitors had signified their intention of entering the race, but when the fifty-four-mile race began only six cars appeared at the starting point at Jackson Point and Midway Plaisance. They were Duryea Motor Wagon Company, Springfield, Mass, gasoline; De La Vergne Refrigerating Machine Company, New York, gasoline; Morris and Salom, Philadelphia, electric; H. Mueller and Co., Decatur, Ill., gasoline; R. H. Macy Company, New York, gasoline; Sturges Electric Motorcycle, Chicago, electric.

The judges were Major Gen. Wesley Merritt, Commander of the Department of the Missouri; Professor John P. Barrett, City Electrician of Chicago and Chief of Electricity at the Columbian Exposition, and Henry Timken, President of the National Carriage Builders' Association. The cars were off on a signal from Assistant Judge C. P. Kimball. But let The Motorcycle tell the story.

"J. F. Duryea leaped into the wagon, followed by Arthur W. White, the umpire. At 8:55 o'clock the word 'Go' was uttered and the motorcycle passed swiftly through the crowd, which opened and closed on it as it rushed on. A minute later the Benz wagon of the De la Vergne Refrigerating Company was started amid cheers. Frederick C. Haas, inventor of the steering gear on the De la Vergne, operated the machine, with James F. Bate as umpire. The Benz motor in this case proved unequal to the task of getting over bad pieces of road from the starting point to Fifty-fifth Street. The wheels slipped around in the snow, but failed to go forward. Then Mr. Haas decided he would not attempt to race, and the wagon was shoved over the deep snow to a better part of the road.

"Macy's wagon was started in good shape at 8:59 o'clock with Jerry O'Connor as the operator and Lieutenant Samuel Rodman Jr. as umpire. Mr. O'Connor had to jump out and push his machine over the snow at Midway Plaisance before he reached a hard track. The Sturges electric motorcycle left at 9:01, with Harold Sturges, the owner, and T. T. Bennett, the umpire, on board. The Morris and Salom electric wagon left a minute later with Mr. Morris and Hiram P. Maxim, the umpire, on board. The Mueller operated until 10:06:45. Oscar Mueller operated the wagon of which C. P. King acted the umpire.

"The Duryea was the first to cross the line, followed closely by the Macy machine. The next across was the De la Vergne, which found the snow so formidable in South Park that its owners finally decided to withdraw from the race.

"The judges," continues The Motorcycle, "after the start, had come to the Leland Hotel, where they observed the Duryea and the others pass. The Macy was the second to pass the auditorium. It overtook the Duryea at Rush and Erie Streets, where the latter temporarily broke down. But the Macy machine, before achieving this triumph, created great excitement near the Art Institute by colliding with an Adams Street horse car from the rear. The machine had taken the rail behind the car and when the car stopped, in an effort to stop also, the motor slid on the rail and stayed in the rear dashboard of the car. No one was hurt and the delay was only that of a moment.

"When the Sturges motorcycle passed the Leland the judges and a crowd of spectators shouted: 'Good boy, Struges.' The Mueller machine also was cheered and the excitement was great when at the Tower Place the Morris and Salom Motor made an effort to overtake the Macy and Duryea. A shout came from the Mueller crowd as they passed the Northside water tower: 'We're just one hour and sixteen minutes out from Jackson Park.' The distance was nine miles."

The first relay station, at Grace Street and Sheridan Drive, was reached first by the Macy wagon at 11 o'clock, when Driver O'Connor stopped for several minutes to "look over his machinery, make a hitch or so in his running gear," and to take on a fresh supply of oil and water. It departed at 11:10:30. Then came the Duryea car, whose umpire inquired how far ahead was the Macy car, and upon being informed by a policeman that it had passed twenty minutes earlier, shouted back:

"We'll overhaul him pretty soon."

The Mueller motor wagon didn't come into sight until nearly an hour later at 12:25:30. It chugged along towards Evanston, where the turn was made in the presence of a crowd which, according to The Motorcycle, "was a bigger jam than assembled at Main Street and Chicago Avenue on Decoration Day to see the bicycle races make the turn." The Duryea machine was slightly in the lead of the Macy carriage when the turn was made.

"The pneumatic tires of the former," continues The Motorcycle, "caused it to run more smoothly. The gearing of the latter did not seem to be in the best working order, and thus its engineer was handicapped for speed. The turn was made at 12:50 o'clock. Following the progress of the motorcycle was a cutter containing Frederick C. Haas, who had abandoned the race with the De la Vergne machine. In crossing the tracks of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad near Calvary Cemetery the cutter was just ahead of the Macy wagon. The sleigh's runner caught in a frog and the occupants of the cutter were thrown on the tracks. Before they had time to pick themselves up and count the bruises the Macy wagon came along. The steering gear of the motorcycle had given out, and as the wagon came opposite the overturned sleigh it switched suddenly and smashed into the cutter. No damage was done.

"While coming back through Rogers Park the Macy carriage met a hack which did not give the right-of-way. In trying to turn out the tire of the motorcycle slipped and its left front wheel collided with the rear wheel of the hack. By the collision four spokes were badly chipped and the steering gear so bent as to be almost useless. Fortunately the gauge of the vehicle was the same as the street car tracks, and by keeping on the car tracks it managed to reach the second relay station, a mile farther on."

The second relay station, at North Clark Street and Devon Avenue, was passed first by the Duryea carriage, second by the Macy machine and last by the Mueller motorcycle, which "puffed its way slowly and laboriously along, its pneumatic tires wrapped with twine to keep them from slipping, and one of its operators sanding the belt on the motor for the same reason." Past the second relay the Duryea machine, running smoothly, took a wrong road and was lost from its observation sleigh which then gained a considerable lead and waited at the next sign post on the race course until the racer caught up.

At Douglas Park the crowds waiting for the finish were entertained by about 200 small boys who snowballed and put to flight the city police guarding the approach of the racers. Continues account of The Motorcycle:

"Wet and cold, darkness already coming on, and not a motorcycle in sight, the small boys and the little girls and the elder folk went home. Consequently, when, a few minutes before 6 o'clock, the Duryea motor came through Douglas Park, laboring with every bad roadway, there was no one to greet it on California Avenue but a representative of The Times-Herald. Lacking spectators, except here and there a solitary workman on his way home, or the belated watchman of one of the ill-smelling soap factories in the district the men on the motor gave vent to war-whoops, cheers and cat-calls and other manifestations of joy over the victory they were winning.

"To Ashland Avenue but one sleigh was passed. The darkness was on and, hidden behind two horse-drawn rigs, the motorcycle was comparatively unnoticed. But at Halsted a woman crossing the street with an escort caught sight of the strange rig and jumped back from the crossing frightened. On the opposite corner at a drug store a crowd of men cheered. Young boys began to chase the motorcycle and shout but they could not keep up.

"No delays were met with but a stoppage for gasoline and the holding of the motor at the crossing of the Fort Wayne Road for passing trains for four minutes. After this the run to South Park and then to the starting line of the morning was uneventful. Not fifty people saw the last stages of the finish or knew that the Duryea had established a world's record in the capacity of a motorcycle to conquer even King Winter himself. It was just 7:18 when Frank Duryea threw himself out of the seat of the motor and announced the end. His hand was grasped by the few who saw him cross the line. The congratulations were hearty. The crowd of travelers were hungry. The Duryea was wheeled about and started for her quarters on Sixteenth Street."

Frederick U. Adams, who had charge of the race for Mr. Kohlsaat, commenting on the results of the contest, said it was significant that one of the men who had entered a car in the race had tried to follow his machine with a light two-horse wagon, but the horses were unequal to the task.

CHALMERS

WE welcome the opportunity to explain to motorists why the "CHALMERS" is an exceptionally sound investment.

Motorists to-day are deeply interested in what a car will do. They also want definite information as to what it will cost to maintain. We welcome the opportunity to place these facts before you. We believe, if you study the "CHALMERS" in detail, then go for a trial run, you will understand why it is such worderful motor car value.

All you need do is to let us know when it will be convenient to have the demonstration; we will then make suitable arrangements.

Luxury In Car Fittings

Designers Aim To Please The Women; New Leathers And Color Schemes

Fastidious feminine tastes in motor cars can be suited this year. A visit to the popular salons and automobile showrooms makes one quite bewildered with the variety of models found there. There are high cars and low cars; enormous cars and wee ones; the most elaborate equipment that fortune can attain and the stripped chassis that appeals to the more sportive temperaments. Never has there been such an array of subtle accessories that make the interior of a town car the epitome of luxury. And never has the roadster or racer for women been so practical.

The designers have had a large order for this season. Much has been said about the economic tendency of the Americans because of hard times, so the designers have been charged to take all that into account. They have, therefore, divided their attention between those who look upon tomorrow as another day and those who do not. It is such a joy to them to let their imaginations run riot—to produce something really new and distinctive. At first it was said that they complained a little at this new American attitude of saving for the future. They argued that the foreign designer would throw up his hands and say it could not be done—that art could not hold sway when one had to keep an eye on the expenditure, but American adaptability conquered, and the result is all that the most exacting could desire.

The producers, too, have had a hand. Perhaps it was the pinch of hard times that overcame the automobile manufacturers along with other industrial enterprises, that caused old Mother Necessity to bestir them, for never before has there been such uniformity of purpose. This year's cars show that all have been bent upon turning out the very best that the resources and their factories can produce. Even in the standard cars of less expensive makes the workmanship is far ahead of anything shown in former years. The cars priced at from G.$800 to $2,000 have any number of new features.

MANY NEW LEATHERS

Take leathers, for instance. No one would have believed a few years ago that there could be such a variety. The natural assumption was that where leather had to be on a car it was, but there was little question as to what kind it would be. There was pigskin of perhaps two or three grades, and Spanish or Moroccan leather if one wanted to be really dashing. Not more than half a dozen choices in all. But now a great book of leather samples is provided. They range from the more familiar leathers to those formerly used only for milady's handbag, and some new grades, all with most intriguing new names. On the really smart car one finds very interesting combinations of these leathers, serving, in addition to a utilitarian purpose, a decorative one as well, for a clever combining of leathers is pleasing and adds to the smart appearance of a car.

But a serious rival to leather in the enhancement of the closed car is the hardware. Here, indeed the manufacturers have shown their mettle. There is the abundant choice of bone, mother-of-pearl, ivory, Sheffield silver, brass and aluminium, or any combination of them. Cut glass is also an attractive addition to the hardware fixtures. In fact, the custom body builders have come to realise that the variety of products for these accessories has been far from exhausted, and once realising the resources at their command have become quite reckless in turning out distinctive designs. The use of brass is perhaps the newest and most unusual departure. It gives such a lavish appearance to the car that it bids fair to be extremely popular. One smart town car seen recently had the entire hood of brass, which was also used liberally in the trimming and hardware. With the latter old ivory was used, the creamy tint blending beautifully with the gold. The car, which was hung low, was painted a soft French blue, which was further set off by the deep tan interior. Another car which will soon be seen on the streets of New York is of delicate gray, with the interior of the same tones and fittings and hardware of solid silver.

BRIGHT TINTS FAVORED

The sombre tones so much in favor during the past few years seems to have lost caste. The smart cars are painted in brighter tints and the interiors either match them or are of contrasting shade, but equally bright. No longer does milady choose her motor car with neutral tones so that the interior will match any gown she may wear. A car is much too important in her life to have it an uninteresting means of transit. It is now selected with greatest care and, if need be, her gowns are made to fit the car. After all, the smartly dressed woman favors a certain color during an entire season. It may be the color of the moment, according to the decree of fashion, or it may be her own favorite color—quite the one for her and incorporated by her in various tones throughout her entire wardrobe. With all this settled and definitely in her mind she turns to the selection of her car and considers it with equal care, making clear to the designer her desires so far as color is concerned, and working out with him the details on that preface.

An interesting shade for the dark woman this season is red, the deep, dull tones that accentuate the florid color of the Latin type of woman. The most favored tone of red shown for the motor car is called Sultan red. It is somewhat kindred to the Chinese red so popular a few seasons ago, and while it is dull it is rich and has character and harmonises with practically any shade of red in one's gown. A very bizarre and artistic effect may be had in combining it with flame color, now much favored for evening gowns. The exteriors of the cars are rendered striking by the combination of a painted body set off by a hood of aluminium or nickel.

Various shades of blue are used for interiors by blond women, who also find grays and tans particularly fitting. But the soft tones of these latter shades are offset by the brightly painted exteriors. The car for the country, which is taken a little more seriously these days by the feminine motorist, who delights more and more in driving her own car, is done in any of the striking colors.

AIR-CUSHION SEATS

Many new ideas have been introduced this year in the way of comfortable seats. In the more expensive cars air cushions are shown resting on the more substantial ones of horsehair and leather. These are covered either with a delicate grade of leather or other material. They are also used as back rests and are detachable, only fastened into place by decorative straps. The footrests now considered a necessity, are rendered more decorative than before, and in practically all the high-priced cars extra pillows are furnished, either of the same material and design as the cushions and footrests or of contrasting material and color. Some of these are of silk and very elaborate. The seat in some of the limousines is fashioned after a comfortable arm chair, with a large arm rest well padded. In a few of the models these arm rests can be raised and fit comfortably into the back of the seat. Some even disappear completely and may be used or not according to fancy.

In many of the new cars the front of the tonneau is entirely inlaid with handsome woods—mother of pearl or enamel. Since in most of the newer models the collapsible seats are folded into the bottom of the car, the front is used for various purposes. In one attractive model there was a large space where parcels could be deposited so that the car should never look cluttered up, and the vanity cases are so large they can fill all the needs of a week-end bag.

ARTISTIC TRIMMINGS

Only in the standard cars are the vanity cases boldly shown. Even when the vanity cases are at the side of the car within easy reach of the occupant they are arranged so that they disappear into the side and are neatly concealed by some clever device. The trimmings of inlay or mahogany with other rare woods in various combinations are becoming popular. These seem to fit in well with a motor car and are less tiresome than some trimmings that have been used in the past.

The materials, too, are varied to a bewildering degree. There are broadcloths, twills, rep and heavy duvetyne. In the smarter cars two or three of the materials will be combined and sometimes different tones, but always in the same color. Never is the contrasting cloth or any combination of colors used for the interior. Plain materials are favored, although some striped twills are shown and work in very nicely in some models. One stunning model has a plush carpet of deep tan, with the upholstery of a lighter shade and the cushions and foot rests of a sand color.

Franklin Producing More Closed Cars, Report Reveals

A recent report issued by The Franklin Motor Car Company shows that during the first eight months of last year practically 49 percent of the cars shipped to distributors and dealers throughout the country were of the inclosed type, which represents an increase of 9 percent over the corresponding figure of 1920.

In commenting on this statement an official of the company states that the inclosed type is more than ever coming into its own.

"The inclosed Franklin types," he says, "are not alone favored in the east, where the winters are rigorous, but in California sedan and brougham are proving more popular than ever.

"The first sedan ever made in America was placed on the market by the Franklin company in September, 1913. At first the public took slowly to the sedan which was radically different from anything that had been shown before, and only thirty-two were sold the first year. Every year, however, the demand for the sedan increased and became more insistent until during the year ending September 1, 1921, the Franklin company shipped 4328 sedans. It is also stated that a large number of broughams were shipped as well.

"The advantages of the inclosed car are many. It is a car for both winter and summer. In the winter it protects the passengers from chill and rain, while in the summer it protects them from the dust that is quite often encountered along country roads and city streets."

C'S OF MOTORIST ALPHABET

The three big "C's" of the motorist's alphabet are: Caution, courtesy and cool-headedness. Without a knowledge of these three letters and what they stand for, no automobile operator can hope to avoid disaster.

H. P. OF MOTOR—: WHAT IS MEANT?

The word "horse power" is used in the vocabulary of every automobile owner, yet how many motor car drivers know exactly what the word means.

Seeking to explain the meaning of the word, W. J. Benson, San Francisco automobile dealer, states:

"In the first place, 'horse power' does not mean the average load which a horse can pull in continued service. It has been defined a s the customary unit in which is expressed the rate at which mechanical energy is delivered by or to a machine and is equal to 33,000 foot pounds per minute. In other words, it is a rate of doing work, this in turn being the force required and the distance it moves.

"So the horse power of a machine is measured by the length of the piston stroke and the pressure in pounds per square inch exerted by the piston, all considered in relation to the number of revolutions per minute of the crankshaft.

"This is determined by the use of the friction brake, electric generator, water pump or fan, a weight being attached to measure the pound factor necessary to calculate the horse power. Many are confused by the term S. A. E. rating, which has tended to supersede the old brake horse power classification just explained.

"This is a formula adopted by the Society of Automotive Engineers and is intended to estimate the power of an engine at 1000 feet of piston speed per minute and with a mean effective pressure of seventy pounds per square inch.

"Thus the horse power of a motor determined by this method equals the diameter of the cylinder in inches squared, multiplied by the number of cylinders and divided by 2.5. This is a more theoretical method of rating an engine than involving the brake test, and it may be readily understood that two motors of the same S. A. E. rating may actually develop different brake horse power.

"The term horse power was originally used by James Watt, the inventor of the first practical steam engine, after he had conducted numerous tests with the idea of determining how much load the average horse could pull in continued service.

"His method was to have the animal raise a weight by means of a rope running over a pulley. His first formula gave one horse power as 22,000 foot-pounds per minute. In other words, a single horse could lift 22,000 pounds to the height of one foot in one minute. But Watt changed his figures to 33,000 foot pounds later, the measurement now used."

Truth is Mighty and Shall Prevail

The universal popularity of Studebaker Cars is attested by the fact that the corporation enjoyed the biggest business in its history in the year of 1921.

The sales of Studebaker Cars were 29% greater than in 1920, notwithstanding the fact that the total number of cars sold of all other makes (except Ford) was 40% less than in 1920. Stated otherwise, Studebaker's ratio of sales was 129 and the total of other makes 60, as compared with 1920.

The number of Studebaker Cars sold in the year of 1921 in both Greater New York and in the Metropolitan District exceeded the sales of any other make except Ford.

Studebaker is the world's largest producer of six-cylinder cars.

The only possible explanation of the popularity of Studebaker Cars lies in their quality, durability and dependable performance in users' hands. Proof that the cars stand up in service with minimum repairs is evidenced by the fact that our sales of Repair Parts in 1921 were 12% less than they were in 1919, notwithstanding that 118,000 new cars were sold and put in operation in 1920 and 1921. Based on the total estimated number of Studebaker Cars in operation in 1921, we sold $16.00 worth of parts per car for repairs from all causes, including accidents.

The materials and workmanship in Studebaker Cars measure up to the highest standards known to the automobile industry. Substantially better intrinsic values cannot be obtained at any price. The theory that high prices necessarily mean fine cars is fallacious, simply because prices are not based upon intrinsic values but upon production costs of individual makers, which vary widely according to their ability and manufacturing facilities. Obviously, high costs of production, inevitably arising from incompetence or inadequate manufacturing facilities, mean not only high prices but actually inferior cars.

With $70,000,000 of actual net assets including $36,000,000 of plant facilities, Studebaker stands unsurpassed in ability and resources to manufacture economically and give the greatest intrinsic value possible for a given price.

TOO MANY FRIENDS SPOIL MOTOR FUN

Legal Crape Hanger Always Near To Warn Of Possibilities Of Accidents

He walked dejectedly into one of those garages in the New York automobile belt where they buy and sell second-hand cars.

"Do you buy second-hand cars here?" he asked with a choke in his voice.

"Sure," replied the proprietor, "we buy 'em, sell 'em, we almost give 'em away."

"I want to sell"—a pause—"mine."

"All right, you're on. What's the matter with it?"

"Nothing."

"I've got too many friends, I'm too kind hearted."

"I don't know whether I ought to tell you or not. It's ruined my life. You, too, may be blasted if you know."

"Do you know that if you invite a friend to go riding with you and he accepts and an accident happens through your negligence and he is hurt he can sue you and recover damages?"

"That's a new one on me," said the dealer: "but what of it? What friend would sue another friend for a little riding accident? What's an accident among friends?"

The look fo melancholy deepened on the face of the visitor as he replied:

"If your friend gets a broken leg because you stepped on the gas instead of the brake you are no longer his friend. He becomes your enemy and an enemy seeks revenge."

MISERABLE EITHER WAY

He turned aside, overcome for the moment by emotion, and the garage man heard disconnected mutterings—"best little boat any man ever owned"—"runs like a railroad clock"—"never had a minute's trouble"—"that lawyer"—"no more play days."

"Nothing will serve but this separation operation," said the dealer, "you're sure?"

"I'll be miserable when I part with it, but I'll be more miserable if I don't," was the answer. "I haven't had any accident yet, but it's getting on my nerves and I don't dare trust myself. And whether or not there's an accident I'll lose all my friends anyway if I don't get rid of it."

"Let's hear the details, Brother Bill," said the proprietor sympathetically. "Come on, ease your mind before there's a rush call for gasoline."

"If there was one thing I enjoyed," began the narrative, "it was taking our friends out with us on our Sunday afternoon trips. No one ever had to come around and look expectant. I had them all dated up a week ahead. One Sunday one of these friends happened to be a lawyer.

"'Now be careful, Eddie,' he laughed when we started out. 'You asked me to go on this ride, you know, and if there's an accident and I get hurt through your negligence I can sue you and collect damages.'

"Naturally I thought he was joking. 'Fat chance,' I told him. 'In the first place, I'm the best little driver, next to Barney Oldfield, that ever held a steering wheel, and in the second place when you accept my invitation you take the responsibility for whatever happens to you.'

"'Not at all,' said he, 'and I mean it. What I told you is sound law and will be upheld by any court in the land. If you invite me and I accept and you run into a tree or another car and there's a smash-up and I'm injured, I've got you if I want to be mean enough to sue.'

OWNER BEGINS TO WORRY

"I scoffed at first, but as we went along I began to think more and more about what he said. I wasn't afraid of my own driving, but how about the other fellow's? He'd swear it was my negligence, not his, that caused the accident if there was one and that would give any one in my car a chance to sue me. I actually began to get a little nervous and did something I had never done before—imagined myself in an accident. I saw the whole thing—smash, court, verdict of jury, 'We find for the complainant in the sum of $10,000, bank balance wiped out.' And with that picture in my mind I did let the little old boat skid a bit.

"'Watch out there,' said the legal crape hanger, 'that was a near one. I'll arrange now to settle with you out of court. It saves time, lawyer's fees and money.' There was no more joy for me in that ride. I drove like the most scared beginner with his first flivver. For the rest of the week the thought of the chances I had taken and would take whenever I invited friends to ride with me almost made me unfit for business. I didn't invite anybody to go riding with us that next Sunday.

"The next Sunday a couple of friends who had been accustomed to riding with us dropped around about the usual starting hour. I had just been tuning the car up when they arrived, but when I saw them I said something was out of gear and there wouldn't be any pleasure in riding that day. I'm not a good liar. They showed that they knew it, and didn't linger long. After they had gone I sneaked the car out and the wife and I went out, but I didn't enjoy it. I felt like a thief. And of course we had to meet those friends I had told the car was out of commission.

SUNDAY A DAY OF TORTURE

"Sundays became days of torture to me. Something always delayed us from starting until somebody dropped in. They would expect a bid for a ride. The wife and I would try to make talk on any subject but one involving the use of the words 'automobile' and 'ride.' We acted like a couple of bandits trying to throw detectives off the scent.

"Friends began to stop calling—at any time. Then I began to hear a word dropped here and there. If I met one of them on the street he'd ask, 'Got the boat fixed yet, Eddie?' or 'Why don't you get a car that runs?' And they'd say it with a smile and an inflection of the voice that told me as plain as day what they really meant was:

"'You cheap sport, afraid giving a friend a ride will boost your gasoline bill a few cents.'

"So it came to this: I must lose my friends or give them rides if I kept the car; if I gave them rides, with this apparition of accident and damage suits sitting on the steering wheel I'd be sure to have one. And, once hurt, how would I know a friend wouldn't become an enemy? No, there's nothing else to do but sell. And when she's gone the only sunshine in my life will come from holding fast to this thought:

"My lawyer friend that was has bought a car. I hope he takes a friend riding and has an accident. I hope that friend will sue him and get a verdict that will stop him from riding even in the subway."

A Regal Affair In Those Days

ANDES TOUR A REAL THRILLER

Buenos Aires Tire Man Makes Trip Through Mountains In Studebaker

Touring the Andes mountains is as much of a joy to the people of South America as Sierra Nevada and Rocky mountain trips are to the motorists of the U. S., judging from a letter recently received from the Studebaker distributor of Buenos Aires and telling of a trip taken by Carlos Reed, Firestone representative in the southern city.

Reed and his family made a tour recently of the northern provinces in his Studebaker big six which began at Buenos Aires and ended at Valparaiso and, which while reported to be extremely beautiful and rugged, was filled with untold difficulties which taxes the car to the utmost.

The intinerary took the Reed party through Nahuel Haupi pass and the Inca pass of the Andes mountains, where in prehistoric days the Incas lived and developed a civilisation which was generations ahead of anything known in the western hemisphere. Reed was the first man to pilot an automobile through this section of the country, which consists of lofty mountain peaks and crags.

LAND OF INCAS

Here in days before even the old testament of the Bible was written or its people lived, the Incas thrived. The ruins of their mountain cities exist today, reminders of a glorious past of a famous people.

One of the peculiarities of the Incas was their burial custom. Like the Egyptians, who followed them on earth, they developed a mummyfying system which has preserved their remains to this day in splendid condition. Unlike the Egyptians, however, they did not preserve the entire body in life size, but in some manner unknown, removed the bones and through a shrinking process reduced the human form to doll size. The features and general body shape was retained, however, and many of the "doll" mummies are on display today in the museums in South America.

According to Reed the trip was filled with thrills. In many places the road, such as it was, wound around through the mountains for miles on the edge of cliffs which fell away for thousands of feet.

PLEASANT TRIP

"The trusty Studebaker never failed me in the many emergencies," Reed wrote on reaching Valparaiso. "And beauties of the Andes are without a par in the world, I believe, and if the folks of the States really want an exceptional tour, amid surroundings that are different from anything they can get at home, and are not afraid of the many difficulties which you meet everywhere, let them come to South America and make the run through the Inca country. My only warning is to be assured that their car is right and will stand up to hard going, for it will get plenty of it."

While Studebaker dealers in the United States have been busy capturing sales and endurance records, the distributers in South America have been pretty much on the job themselves. In Buenos Aires-Rosario-Buenos Aires race a Studebaker big six won over a field of thirty-four cars, and later, in the 'La Manana' of Montevideo, Uruguay, the most important race held in South America for eight years, it again captured first place, beating out a field of eighteen cars.

The first race was over almost impassable roads. The second was run over a 1000-killometer track. The second car in the "La Manana" finished an hour behind the Studebaker.

CLUB 'B' WINS OVER POLICE IN SCOTTOWE CUP REPLY

Will Play In Final With Public School For Trophy

SCORE WAS 3 TO 1

Club Halves Outshone Rest Of Team; Ewing Was Star Of Game

BY "WHISTLE"

The replay between the Police and the Football Club "B" teams was worked off on Saturday and produced a fast and exciting game finishing with the Club on top with a 3-1 win.

The Police kicked off with a strong breeze behind them and went away at once, Watson trying a long one which proved harmless.

The Club forwards soon began to move and getting down, Koning passed to Clifford who was well up but he was in a bad shooting position and Quayle cleared.

The Police forwards kept up the attack and were playing fast football, but finishing weakly, a dangerous attack by the right wing was broken up by Brown who cleared at the expense of a corner, which proved useless. A moment later a fine run by Hotchkiss finished with a nice center, but again Brown headed clear.

The Club was not idle and they were the first to register; a nice pass from Daily found Clifford well up, who charged Isaacs, and with both of them on the ground, Nash had no difficulty in scoring.

FORWARDS NOT WILLING

With the wind helping, the Police kept up the attack, but the forwards were not willing to take changes on long shots. Knight however, thought differently, he put a beauty just outside the upright, followed soon after by a dangerous one high up in the corner, but Leach had it marked down, and cleared.

Then came the equaliser, Hotchkiss shot and Forshaw trying to head clear deflected it past Leach safely into the net. This bucked the Police up and Bailey and Carnell got through streaking for goal, it looked all clear, only MacMurray slipped across and robbed cleverly.

A couple more dangerous dropping shots kept Leach on his toes but he fisted both and safely. A run by the Club forwards gave a nice opening. Koning and Nash worked down, but the latter wasted the effort by putting behind.

The Police went away again from the goal kick and their speedy wing flier, Hotchkiss sent in a perfect dropping center, which neither Bailey nor Carnell could get to, and it was cleared for a useless corner. The whistle sounded, leaving the Police on equal terms with the wind against them.

CLUB LEAD ATTACK

The second half started with the Club pressing Nash and Daily got away but the latter shot outside. A fine kick by Quayle gave the Police a chance, Brown misjudged and Carnell rushed him, he went down and passed across, but no one was there.

Then followed a period of steady attack by the Club, both wings getting in some good work, but the finish lacked cohesion, and despite the pressure they couldn't score. Crowley who had hurt his leg and replaced Isaacs in goal was doing fine work and saved splendidly, on more than one occasion.

The Police woke up and a beautiful run by Watson and Isaacs finished with a hard low shot from the latter, which Leach picked up in the corner. Then came the Club's second goal. Deer found himself on the corner line with the ball and a clear passage, he shot straight across the goal and Crowley trying to kick clear, the ball slipped off the top of his foot, and glanced back into goal.

The Police tried hard to equalise and pressed strongly, but several good chances were lost owing to poor shooting, both Carnell and Watson shooting over. Occasional runs by the Club looked dangerous, once Koning broke through and got right in only to put the ball on to Crowley's foot, and a hard one from Deer, looked a winner, till Crowley's saved the situation.

The last goal arrived from a De Mann passing to Clifford who dribbled past the defence and beat Crowley with a cross shot. Nothing further occurred, despite the effort of the Police to decrease the lead and the whistle went to a 3-1 win

SPORT AND STAGE

BY DOMINO

("The Three Twins" left us last night and were given a wonderful send off. The A.D.C. and its lieutenants are to be congratulated upon a popular success. I don't know who is to win the Skottowe Cup, and it wouldn't be safe to bet upon either the Scots or the Machinists to win the trophy this afternoon. What is ahead of us in "Sport and Stage" is wrapped in mystery—and this leaves me nothing to write about.

But some poet or other sings that "In Spring the young man's fancy lightly turns to love—or verse." It is too late in life for me to turn to the former so I'm going to keep in season by having a shot at the latter.)

Miss Lassie's Adventure

Miss Lassie was a typist and her work was only fair,
She typewrote, sometimes shortwrote, was obsessed with ne'er a care.
When office hours were over she would fix her hair and hose,
Would use a little mirror and puff to white her nose.
By other little means her beauty she'd enhance,
Then meet her Mr. Best Boy to take her to some dance.
Her life seemed very pleasant, from trouble it was free,
Until she joined the chorus of the local A.D.C.
She didn't have a line to say, she hadn't to high-kick,
In fact reporters thought that our Miss Lassie was a "stick."
But she had caught the acting "bug" and now her whole ambition
Was to be Ellen Terry and to give a new rendition
Of Rosalind, Ophelia, of Beatrice or the Shrew,
Which would outrival every player audiences knew.
She thought about the stage when she was taking taipan letters.
She looked upon the office hours as miserable fetters.
One eve she left the office door and vowed she'd leave the town,
And make her way to London—the place to win renown.

Determination

She visited the theater—the best one in the City—
Which had a vogue in plots and also dialogue quite witty.
She asked to see the manager. The "Call boy" said "Yes Miss"
She entered by the stage door, which gave her boundless bliss.
The manager was awf'ly nice and not a bit like others.
He treated her in the same way as did her Dad and brothers.
She said she felt a calling to go upon the stage,
The manager said "Quite right, miss, I think you'll be a rage."
He sent for Mr. Milne and asked that author to look slippy
And write a play to suit the maid which should be really snippy.
He called for the producer and the intro. "My new star"
Made our petite Miss Lassie write home to Ma and Pa.

Anticipation

Rehearsals shortly started; she learned her words at once,
You see Miss Lassie "Pelmanised" and never was a dunce.
The supers and the principals pronounced Miss Lassie great
And ne'er a Green Eyed Monster hissed once a Hymn of Hate.
The author thought Miss Lassie knew a great deal more than he
And told her do it as she pleased, she answered "Wait and see."
Producer and stage manager both came and asked advice,
She gave of it most plentifully—thought them very nice.
The scenic artist also came and asked if set and color
Was just the thing. She thought the Sun might be a little duller,
So that the limelight might be seen when shining on her face
And as the "Star" she could outshine the Sun in all her grace.
The artist quickly dimmed the Sun and made the limelights brighter,
And then the booking opened and she waited the "first-nighter."

Realisation

At last arrived the first night when as star she should appear,
She didn't have the faintest sign of nervousness or fear,
The orchestra the overture began in quiet vein,
The house was filling rapidly—success was surely plain—
And then the house lights were put out, and footlights were flashed on,
The curtain rose, a cheer from those, who some girls were mashed on.
The moment came, when on the stage Miss Lassie should arrive,
She entered, bowed, the house arose, the audience was alive,
They shouted, cheered, encored each look, they would not let her go,
A favorite with Mayfair, and a belle with all Soho.
And when at length the interval just gave a breathing space,
Her dressing room was filled with flowers, and jewels from every race,
Lord I'm-Tired proposed to her before the curtain rose,
She said not now, and once again adorned her dainty nose,
The second act was like the first, success was now assured,
She wondered how as typist she ever had endured.
And when the final curtain fell the storm of much applause
Brought up the "rag" some twenty times—she bowed to cheers and roars.
The play was over! The stage door admitted all the classes
Some princes, lords and commoners and lots of silly asses,
But with a haughty nod she left "the chappie" and "the bean"
And hied her to her palace in a brand new limousine.

D--nation

Alas, her joy was over, and she woke up with a scream,
The boy had called her and shefound it all had been a dream.

Letchfield Captures Hunt Club's Challenge Cup At Annual Meet On City Track

Big Crowd Attends 'Unters Meet In Spite Of Counter Attraction

'Unters drew the race public yesterday to the Recreation Grounds, in spite of Kiangwan, in spite of Scottowe cups, and in spite of hockey shields. The crowd that attended the annual meeting of the Shanghai Paper Hunt Club in the city was the biggest, the most colorful, perhaps even the most sporting of any that assembled yesterday for sporting sake.

They saw some good racing, on the flat and over the jumps. Not as good perhaps as might be witnessed if one could follow from good vantage points a real 'Unt, or handicap, yet, withal, full of interest throughout.

Fields were small on the whole, but, even in the Challenge Cup, with its bare three starters, racing was keenly contested. The running of the Beer Stakes, and its win by Capt. McMichael on the pony Hawfinch at the high price of $97.00 and some odd small money, was a fair example of the openness of the meeting. 'Unting favorites for the most part finished in the fore, but second choices and others were not barred.

Springfield on Keysoe was thrown across the field opposite the grandstand in the seventh race and the pony riderless took every jump came banging home first with Dolly Dalgarno two lengths behind whipping like the devil trying to pass the riderless pony. Almost a duplicate occurred earlier in the day when Pollock on Bachelor Gay in the second race was thrown on the first jump and the pony held the lead, taking one jump past the grandstand where it turned like a flash and went out the gate to the stables. A sensible pony with a good race behind it.

Mr. F. W. Potter, the master of 'Ounds saw his pony Kempston, ridden by Springfield, come home first in the opening race. The Master in his little red riding hood costume added a picturesque touch when he led the pony past the grandstand. And S.V.C. uniforms fresh from the Joffre review gave another touch of color.

Spring Weather, Fast Racing And Flood Of Big Dividends Mark Kiangwan Race Meet

Sunny Skies Bring Out Crowds And Outsiders Have Great Day Of It

Dividend payments flooded to full tide and spilled over yesterday at the Kiangwan races, the first of the new season's meetings at the Kiangwan course. Though another race meeting was in progress at the Shanghai Race Club course no evidence of this was to be gathered from the size of the Kiangwan crowd which filled to overflowing all of the stands. The year's first spring weather helped measurably in making the meeting the success it was, but it may be said also that through all the program of ten events the racing provided was of the first order. The track was still soft from recent rains, but times recorded were fairly good.

The series of upsets began in the first race. The Perseverance Stakes an event for griffins and subscription griffins. In this Mr. J. H. Tam's Beautiful Fellow, ridden by Mr. William Hill, romped in a winner with Ibuki second, and the top payment in the race was $78.80—since the favorite Merryfield failed even to show.

PAYS BIG PRICE

From that point on through the whole card the big dividends came along one after another even through the last race of the day. Incidentally a payment in the third race for win, on the pony Baycroft was well up to highest records. It amounted to $1,103.70 which was paid to the seven individuals who backed the pony. Again in this race the favorite—it was Happy Day with Mr. Hill up—failed to get a place.

Mr. Toeg's grey Nelson, ridden by Mr. Halmovitch provided the final surprise of the day in the tenth race, winning handily from Carlington and The Renown and incidentally paying $381.50. Mazurek, long favorite, did not show.

Perhaps the best race of the day was The March Handican, the seventh race, which brought out a field of fifteen starters, veteran ponies that had failed to score in the adverse weather of the New Year's meeting.

This seventh race provided another first class surprise, for in a field that included such racers as Maresfield, Wilson, Hallowe'en, Petersfield and South Down, not to mention a half dozen others, Mr. Day's Trustland, under the guidance of Mr. A. N. Dallas, finished a hard fought contest in first place and Mr. Hart's Nationalist, ridden by Mr. J. Lion, came in three-quarters of length behind in second place with Kongo in third place. Maresfield had been long favorite.

The single steeplechase of the card lacked any striking feature of interest, for but two starters came out Finchfield, ridden by Mr. A. J. Heard and Cleverfellow, ridden by Mr. Pinkerton. Pinchfield set the pace all the way and in the finish distanced the other contestant.

MCKENNA WINS LAST TRIAL OF HARRIERS CLUB

In spite of so many counter sporting attractions yesterday afternoon saw a fair muster of the fleet and the free, when the Shanghai Harriers Club met at the American School for the weekly trial.

Tom McKenna, coach of the Juniors throughout the season ran his own race and with a slight start over the fast pack managed to breast the tape a few yards before George Rose, last year's champion, while J. L. Mears, another champ in the making followed close to heel for third position.

Starting at 3 p.m. from the American School for a five and a half mile course over Kiangwan district roads, the pack made good time over the whole going, the winner finishing the distance in 34 minutes.

The run was the last trial of the club before the big handicap of eight miles, which will mark the close of the season next Saturday.

The big run next week will find Rose and Wilson contending for their honors against Mears, Tipton, and the other runners who have come up in Harriers affairs this season.

The race will be a scratch race with a sealed handicap. It will start as usual from the American School.

HARLEQUINS TAKE HOCKEY TITLE FROM P. S. A., 3 TO 1

Best Play Of Season Gives Shield To Older Players

EXPERIENCE WON

Brilliance Of Boys In Blue Discounted By Safe Play

The Shanghai Hockey Championship for 1922 was roped in by the Harlequins yesterday at Hongkew in their brilliant win over the Portuguese Sporting Association by a score of three to one, thus wresting the title from the North Police, last year's champs.

The game, which was a surprise to victors and vanquished alike, started off in real snappy style, nor was speed slackened during the whole of the play. Taking the attack into their hands, the Boys in Blue invaded the Harlequin field, with the forwards promising great things, and Leitao and Gomes as the hardest workers. The ball, was carried away into opposition ground then, but only for a moment, for within twenty minutes of the start Remedios of the P. S. A. forward had netted a goal, after coming through a close, snappy tussle in the goal area.

Thereafter play was confined to mid-field with occasional seesawing. Another try on the part of the Portuguese did not materialise, and with Harvey of the Harlequins a solid half back, the forward line soon captured the ball and carried it into the P. S. A. territory.

PLAY WAS GOOD

Driving through a mass of legs, Tilley succeeded in driving home the first score for the Harlequins and, with the score on a level of 1-1, the play became if anything more concentrated, faster, with the players getting into their real strides.

Rallying, the Boys in Blue once more got onto the offensive, and repeated tries from them resulted only in wonderful saves on the part of Smith. One particularly close shave saw the ball glance off the horizontal bar.

There ensued some very good hockey, with tries for goal and saves sharply in the fore, but some off-sides there were to spoil the even tenor of the play.

Hot on the trail of an attack Harvey cleared with a hard hit into the P. S. A. field. All along, Richardson pelted after it, unmarked by the halves and unmolested by the backs whom he evaded neatly. The goalie ran out, but he too was passed and with the goal absolutely undefended Richardson scored. The balance leaning to the Harlequins, the entire morale of the game shifted sides and that it was that played the chief factor in the win. Half time came with the score at 2-1, Harlequins up.

BOYS IN BLUE WERE GAME

The battle resumed—for by this time play was getting to be quite in the nature of battle—the Boys in Blue seemed to take on a new lease of play and returned to the attack again and again in really game fashion. The left wing especially, with Leitao in the limelight for omnipresence, came dangerously near scoring, and it was from a pass of the left wing that Gomes got into shooting position only to be foiled by the ever ready Harvey. The Harlequin backs responded repeatedly to the calls made upon their powers, and much credit is due them for the splendid wall of defense set up.

From a couple of penalty hits awarded the boys nothing resulted, and time was getting shorter right along, and there is no doubt that their repeated attempts were deserving of better success.

Some of the finest hockey witnessed in a season of very good hockey was evident at this stage of the game, and it was all in the Harlequin half of the field. Which goes to prove that the P. S. A. understand the game thoroughly.

Suddenly, Morgan of the Harlequin forward line found himself over the ball which he had rescued from a package of legs, and it was a case of hit and chase. And so he hit it and chased it, and got past Roberts, the back, not without some dribbling, however, and succeeded in getting in a shot, which found a home in the net, bringing the score up to 2-1.

The game began to look hopeless in the eyes of the P. S. A., as indeed it was, with only a few more minutes to come. The rest was more or less desultory play which produced nothing—and was not expected to produce anything.

And so to the Portuguese Sporting Association we say, "better luck another time," and to the Harlequins this "hail to the victors—and champs" and to both "thanks for as fine and snappy an exhibition of hockey as was seen this season."

Y.C.A.C. Win Rugby Game Against Kobe

Tokio, Mar. 5.—The Yokohama Country and Athletic Club Rugby football team crushed Kobe, 16 points to 3, in a fiercely contested game yesterday afternoon at the Y. C. and A. C. grounds. The Yokohama victory was considered rather an upset to Kobe expectations, as advance information on the game gave Kobe a big advantage, Yokohama football experts thought. The playing field was soggy and heavy from the morning rains and in addition a strong wind swept the field, making playing conditions far from ideal.

Club 'B' Victors For Scottowe Cup

for, the Club, after what was really a half back game on both sides.

For the Police the three halves were the stars, and it was not their fault the Police lost. Knight was especially good and gave a fine exhibition. The forwards were disappointing and lacked the finish that they usually show in a Scottowe Cup tie. Quayle and Clissold played steady football, but their kicking was not up to usual form.

For the Club the halves quite outshone the rest of the team and Ewing was perhaps the best man on the field, his display of half back tactics was a treat to watch. The backs were adequate, and Brown especially was using his head with fine judgment, but one felt that had the Police forwards been shooting better, they would not have shewn up so well.

All the forwards were pretty useful in midfield, but beyond Clifford's goal and one shot by Deer, there wasn't a drive in the whole match calculated to worry an average goalkeeper.
